Justice Holland Speaks in Australia

Justice Randy Holland was the featured speaker in three Australian cities during a recent week-long visit. Justice Holland gave a keynote address in Canberra to the national meeting of the Australian Law Council's Business Law Section. Justice Holland presented a comparative analysis of fiduciary duties of corporate directors under Delaware and Australian law. The event included a dinner address by the United States Ambassador Jeffrey Bleich. Justice Holland gave a lecture in Melbourne at a program sponsored by the Melbourne Law School and the Monash Law School. He spoke about the Delaware business judgment rule and the important role of independent corporate directors. Justice Holland's final appearance was at the Sydney Law School. He made a panel presentation with Chief Justice Bathurst and Justice McColl of the New South Wales Supreme Court. They compared and contrasted how similar factual cases would be decided differently under the corporate laws of Delaware and Australia. The program was attended by judges, lawyers, professors and law students. There is a significant international interest in Delaware corporate law because more than two-thirds of the Fortune 500 and a majority of the publicly-traded companies in the United States are incorporated in Delaware.
