

COURT OF CHANCERY OF THE
STATE OF DELAWARE

HANDBOOK FOR GUARDIANS
OF ADULTS

This handbook is for informational purposes only. It is not a substitute for legal advice, which can only be given by an attorney. Attorneys and Petitioners should review statutes and Court rules regarding requirements applicable to Delaware guardianships.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

I. INTRODUCTION	1
II. PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS FOR GUARDIANSHIP	5
A. Beginning the Process: The Petition	5
B. Role of the Attorney Ad Litem	13
C. Mediation of Opposed Petitions	14
D. The Hearing	15
E. The Bond	15
F. The Final Order	16
G. After The Final Order	16
III. POWERS AND DUTIES OF GUARDIANS OF THE PERSON	20
A. Introduction and Overview	20
B. General Guidelines	21
C. Decisions Regarding Place of Residence	22
D. Health Care and End of Life Decisions	24
IV. POWERS AND DUTIES OF GUARDIANS OF THE PROPERTY	26
A. Powers of Guardians of the Property	27
B. Duties of Guardians of the Property	28
V. MEDIATION	45
A. Before Mediation	45
B. During Mediation	46
C. After Mediation	47
D. Costs of Mediation	48
VI. GUARDIAN COMMISSIONS	50
VII. TERMINATING THE AUTHORITY OF A GUARDIAN	53
A. Guardianship No Longer Necessary	53
B. Failure of a Guardian to Comply with Duties	55
C. Death of the Protected Person	57
D. Transferring Guardianship To Another State or Court	58
E. Resignation or Death of Guardian	59
GLOSSARY	60
RESOURCES	62

I. INTRODUCTION

This Handbook is for individuals who are applying to be, or have been, appointed the guardian of someone's person and/or property by the Delaware Court of Chancery ("Court") and everyone interested in understanding the role of a guardian.

Delaware law empowers the Court to appoint a guardian for a person with a mental or physical disability who also is in danger and needs assistance in the form of a guardianship. Taking the step to become a guardian for an adult should be a last resort and should only be considered when other alternatives have failed or are no longer appropriate. Alternatives to guardianship include acting as a surrogate decision maker or having the individual execute an Advance Health-Care Directive and/or Durable Personal Power of Attorney appointing an agent. Many individuals with mental or physical disabilities have the ability to understand the nature of these documents and what the documents will allow others to do for them. These alternatives also allow the person with a disability to retain his or her individual rights, have a voice in choosing who may make decisions on his or her behalf, and avoid the cost and difficulty of petitioning the Court to appoint a guardian.

When appropriate and upon a petition to the Court, the Court may appoint a guardian for an adult with a disability who is unable to appoint an agent and who:

By reason of mental or physical incapacity is unable properly to manage or care for their own person or property, or both, and, in consequence thereof, is in danger of dissipating or losing such property or of becoming the victim of designing persons or, in the case where a guardian of the person is sought, such person is in danger of substantially endangering person's own health, or of becoming subject to abuse by other persons or of becoming the victim of designing persons.¹

A disability alone does not warrant appointment of a guardian unless the disability results in the person becoming at risk of suffering harm as specified in the statute. As in Delaware law, this Handbook refers to the person over whom a guardianship is sought as the "Respondent" and a person for whom the Court has appointed a guardian as the "Protected Person."² There are different types of guardianship that may be requested. A "plenary," or full guardianship is a guardianship in which the appointed guardian has all of the powers and duties allowed by Title 12, Chapter 39 of the Delaware Code, and is described in the following sections of this handbook. An "interim" or "emergency" guardianship is one in which a guardian is appointed without notice to others or a hearing before the Court. An "interim" or "emergency" guardianship may be requested when the person with a disability needs immediate assistance for urgent medical care, to prevent imminent serious physical harm, or substantial economic loss or expense. An interim guardian may serve for a period of up to 30 days. To request appointment as an interim guardian, the Petitioner must state in the petition the facts which demonstrate the person with a disability is in danger of incurring immediate serious physical harm or substantial economic loss.

¹ 12 Del. C. § 3901(a)(2).

² The current version of Delaware's guardianship statute, as well as the Court's rules, use the term "person with a disability" or "disabled person." You also may hear Court staff or judicial officers use the term "ward." All are used interchangeably and mean the same thing.

There are some powers that a court-appointed guardian may not exercise on behalf of a Protected Person, and there are some rights that a Protected Person retains, such as the right to vote. In some circumstances, the Court may place additional restrictions or limitations on a guardian's power, and may expressly allow a Protected Person to retain certain types of autonomy and control, such as a right to receive a certain amount of money each month over which the guardian has no authority. Limitations of this nature are made on a case-by-case basis and in consultation with the attorney ad litem, the Petitioner, and the Respondent.

Guardianship appointments may be divided by subject matter, either guardian of the person, or guardian of the property, and also may be both, based on the need of the Respondent. The primary powers and duties of the guardian of the person are discussed at Section III of this Handbook. The primary powers and duties of the guardian of the property are discussed at Section IV of this Handbook. Where the Court limits the appointment to either person or property, it does not grant or impose the powers or duties of the other.

A guardian can be an individual – most frequently a family member – or a business. It is extremely important that the guardian realize that the guardian is a fiduciary and must act accordingly. A fiduciary is a person to whom property or power is entrusted for the benefit of another. This is a position with great responsibility.

Everything the guardian does in that capacity must benefit the Protected Person. This is generally known as the fiduciary duty of loyalty to the person. A guardian must be at least as careful with the Protected Person's property and finances as a reasonably careful person would be with his or her own property and finances.

All guardianships are created and subject to review by the Court. Hearings are held in each county. The office of the clerk of the Court is known as the Register in Chancery, and the personnel in the Register in Chancery assist the Court in supervising guardianship proceedings. If you do not have an attorney, personnel in the Register in Chancery can provide you with some forms for filing your petition for guardianship, but they cannot provide legal advice. Your attorney plays a key role in the guardianship process. If you cannot afford a lawyer, help may be available through Delaware Volunteer Legal Services at the phone number listed in the Resources section of the Handbook. The Court may waive fees associated with the petition for low income Petitioners, if the Petitioner files a request for the waiver. The form of the waiver (in forma pauperis) is on the Court's website.

In the Court, the judge ruling on the petition may be a Chancellor, a Vice Chancellor, or a Master, and the parties should address them accordingly.

II. PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS FOR OBTAINING GUARDIANSHIP

There are a number of steps involved in obtaining guardianship of an adult. They are A) filing a Petition and related forms, B) appointment of an independent attorney to protect the rights of the Respondent, C) mediation among the interested parties if the petition is opposed, D) a hearing, unless the Court waives the hearing, and E) compliance with formalities to obtain a final order in which the Court appoints a guardian. Each of these steps is discussed in detail below. The Petitioner may seek reimbursement for costs and fees relating to the guardianship.

A. Beginning the Process: The Petition

A person seeking to be appointed guardian must file a petition, along with required or supporting documents, as discussed in detail below.

1. Information Required In The Petition

Delaware law requires that the petition include specific information about both the Petitioner and the Respondent. Each of these is listed here and is also included in the Petition form provided on the Court's website.

- Petitioner's name, address, and relationship to the Respondent.
- Respondent's name, age, marital status, domicile, and place of residence.

- Names and addresses of any potentially interested party. If an interested party is under 18 years old, include the age of the minor. Interested parties are defined in Delaware law as
 - Respondent's spouse or Next of kin. Next of kin are the person(s) entitled to inherit through the estate of the Respondent if the Respondent died without a will, including the Respondent's spouse, children, parents, siblings, and, if there are none of those, more remote family members.
 - Respondent's agent under a power of attorney or living will (sometimes called an advance health care directive),
 - Respondent's executor or alternate executor appointed in a will,
 - Trustee or trust protector appointed under a trust in which the Respondent has an interest,
 - Any person primarily responsible in the past six months for the care of the Respondent or the Respondent's finances, and
 - Any hospital, nursing home (including independent and assisted living), or care facility of any kind, where the Respondent received care during the period identified in the Court's rules. Include the name of an administrator or other contact person in identifying the care facility.

- If the Respondent resides in or was admitted to a health care facility, include the date that the Respondent was admitted and the reason for the admission. It is helpful to the Court to include the Respondent's current condition, particularly if the condition has changed since the admission.
- Whether the Respondent has a will, power of attorney, and advance health care directive or living will. If the Respondent has any of these documents, include the location of the original document and the name(s) of the agent(s) named in each document.
- Whether the Respondent was a member of the armed forces.
- Whether the Respondent was represented by a Delaware attorney within two years of the filing of the petition. If so, include the name and contact information of the attorney and the nature of the attorney's representation, if known.
- Whether the Respondent has a guardian to manage his or her person or property. Usually, this is not the case for adult Respondents unless a guardian was appointed for the Respondent in another state.
- A list of the Respondent's assets and their estimated value. Assets commonly include bank accounts, investment accounts, stocks, bonds, retirement accounts, real estate, collectibles and collections, automobiles, boats, and any other money or property, such as life insurance with cash value. Be as specific as possible and identify any assets that are owned jointly with another person. The petition must include the name of the joint owner in identifying the jointly-held assets.

- A list of the sources and amounts of income received by the Respondent. Common sources of income include Social Security, Veteran's benefits, pensions, retirement accounts, rental income, and royalties.
- A list of the Respondent's obligations and liabilities, such as debts (credit cards, loans, mortgages, etc., including both balances and minimum monthly payments), monthly expenses (housing, utilities, food, etc.), clothing and toiletries, any health care expenses (providers, medications, insurance premiums, etc.), or any other regular expenses incurred by the Respondent.
- A list of any alternate resources or payment sources for the Respondent's care. Examples of these include Veteran's benefits, Medicaid, or Supplemental Security Income ("SSI").
- Whether notifying the Respondent of the petition to become the Respondent's guardian will cause the Respondent harm.

The petition must also include

- A statement that the Respondent is unable properly to manage his or her person or property because of a disability, and as a consequence is in danger of dissipating his or her property or becoming the victim of designing persons;

- A statement that the Petitioner consents to the Register in Chancery being appointed agent for the guardian to receive service of process for proceedings related to the guardianship if the guardian is not available in Delaware to receive service; and
- If an interim guardianship is being sought, specific facts demonstrating that the allegedly disabled person is in danger of incurring imminent serious physical harm or substantial economic loss or expense that may occur before a hearing could be held.

The petition must request the Court to appoint a guardian of the Respondent to take charge of and manage the Respondent's person or property, or both.

If the Petitioner fails to include any of these items in the petition, the Court may refuse to accept the petition until the Petitioner corrects the petition to include the omitted information.

2. Documents To File With the Petition

In addition to the petition, the Petitioner must file the following documents before the Court will review and accept the petition. The Court provides forms for each of these documents on its website.

a. Physician's Affidavit

In the physician's affidavit, a physician who has recently treated the Respondent must state that,

Based on tests and my examination of this patient, it is my professional opinion that s/he does have a disability that interferes with the ability to make or communicate responsible decisions regarding health care, food, clothing, shelter, or administration of property.

The physician's affidavit should be specific about the nature of the Respondent's disability. Most physicians state this in the form of a diagnosis (such as dementia, autism, or Alzheimer's disease) or a statement that a specific disability resulted from a medical event or trauma (such as stroke or accident). The physician's affidavit should specify how the condition impacts the ability of the Respondent to function (such as whether they are able to make medical decisions or manage their own money). The physician's affidavit must be notarized.

b. Personal Information Sheet

Each Petitioner must complete a personal information sheet and provide detailed information about the Petitioner so that the Court can ensure it can contact the Petitioner. The personal information sheet must be notarized or signed in the presence of a member of the Register in Chancery staff.

c. Affidavit of Proposed Guardian's History

In this form, each Petitioner (or the proposed Guardian if different from the Petitioner) must provide information about the proposed Guardian's criminal and bankruptcy history. If an answer to a question is "yes," the proposed Guardian must give a detailed explanation relating to that question. This affidavit also asks the proposed Guardian to agree to allow a criminal background check by the Court and must be notarized or signed in the presence of a member of the Register in Chancery staff.

d. Proposed Preliminary Order

The Petitioner must submit a proposed preliminary order for the Court to complete and issue. In the preliminary order, the Court will appoint an attorney ad litem to represent the Respondent and will schedule a hearing to review the Petition for guardianship. The proposed preliminary order will leave a space for the Court to insert the name of the attorney ad litem and the date and time of the hearing.

e. Proposed Final Order

As with the proposed preliminary order, the Petitioner must submit a proposed final order with blanks for the Court to complete and issue. The final order will appoint a guardian for the Respondent (who then becomes a "Protected Person") and specifies the rights and responsibilities of the guardian. The proposed final order may also indicate rights and responsibilities retained by the Protected Person. The proposed final order must contain the following statements:

- A Court order is required to open the Respondent's safe deposit box(es) and to sell or encumber any real estate.
- The guardian must execute a bond (secured or unsecured) in the presence of a notary public and file it within 7 days after the Court signs the final order. No copy of the final order will be provided to the guardian, or anyone else, until the bond has been signed and filed with the Court.
- The attorney ad litem is discharged.
- The Petitioner's attorney (if any) must ensure that the guardian properly opens any guardianship bank account required by the final order, file proof of compliance (that a bank account was opened), and file the inventory (if required) within 30 days of entry of the final order.

The person appointed guardian may be able to pay (or be reimbursed for previous payment of) attorneys' fees and Court costs, including costs of mediation, from the Protected Person's assets, upon proper request of and approval by the Court. These requests and orders are often included in the final order. In addition, if an interested party objects to the petition or particular guardian and can show that the objection resulted in a benefit to the Protected Person, then the interested party may also be able to recover fees and costs from the Protected Person's assets. In each instance, the Court must approve such payment from the Protected Person's assets before any party may receive such reimbursement or payment.

f. Waivers of Notice and Consent

Any interested party who agrees to the appointment of the proposed guardian may sign a waiver of notice and consent (a form is provided on the Court's website) to that effect and file it with the petition or any time before the hearing. If any interested party does not sign a waiver of notice and consent, the Petitioner must mail³ the non-consenting interested party notice of the hearing by certified mail at least 10 days prior to the hearing date and file an affidavit of mailing, unless the interested party's whereabouts are not known.

B. Role of the Attorney Ad Litem

As indicated above, the Court will appoint an attorney ad litem when it issues the preliminary order. The attorney ad litem represents the Respondent and protects the rights of the Respondent from anyone who might seek guardianship for improper reasons. In general, the Court will not award a guardianship because the Respondent used poor business judgment, is eccentric, or made unwise decisions. The Court may, however, appoint a guardian of a mentally ill person if the mental illness causes the person to be victimized or to neglect his or her health. The attorney ad litem investigates whether the Respondent is competent and/or in need of a guardian. The attorney ad litem then provides his or her findings to the Court in a written report.

³ Notice sent by mail must be provided to the interested parties with any petition filed during the administration of the guardianship. Likewise, each time any petition is filed during the administration of the guardianship, interested parties may sign waivers of notice and consent. If all interested parties consent, the Court may consider the petition before the notice period expires. Otherwise, the petition will be held for the notice period and presented to the reviewing judge only after that period lapses with no objection filed.

If the physician's affidavit states that the Respondent can understand the nature of the petition and telling the Respondent about the petition would not be detrimental to the Respondent's health, then the attorney ad litem will provide a copy of the petition to the Respondent or tell the Respondent about it. If the Respondent is competent and opposes the petition, the attorney ad litem will notify the Court of the Respondent's opposition and may represent the Respondent. If the Respondent is unable to afford an attorney, the attorney ad litem will also report that to the Court so the Court can appoint an attorney to represent the Respondent. If the Respondent is not able to express his or her views, the attorney ad litem will include this information in the report to the Court.

The attorney ad litem usually charges fees for his or her services. These fees are the Petitioner's responsibility. However, the Court may authorize these fees to be paid from the Protected Person's assets, if such authorization is included in the final order. If the Petitioner is indigent and has an approved in forma pauperis application, the Court may pay the attorney ad litem from Court funds.

C. Mediation of Opposed Petitions

If the Respondent or any interested party opposes the appointment of a guardian (in general) or objects to the particular proposed guardian, the Court may order the parties to attend mediation. Mediation is a method to attempt to resolve the matter without a hearing. Mediation is discussed in more detail in Section V.

D. The Hearing

The Petitioner must attend the hearing where the Court considers the petition unless the Court waives the hearing. (If all interested parties sign a waiver of notice and consent and the Petitioner is represented by an attorney, the Court generally waives the hearing and enters the final order.) At the hearing, the Court may want the Petitioner to answer questions about the petition, why the Petitioner seeks to serve as guardian, or the Petitioner's plans to care for and protect the Respondent. If the Petitioner is not represented by an attorney, Court will also review the duties and responsibilities of a guardian during the hearing.

E. The Bond

Once the Court appoints the Petitioner, the Petitioner must sign a bond within 7 days of the hearing. The bond commits the guardian to pay the State of Delaware an amount generally equivalent to the value of the Protected Person's assets, plus one year of the Protected Person's income, in case the guardian fails to perform all duties imposed on it by Delaware law.

The Court may order a bond without surety. "Without surety" means that the guardian does not need to pay money to an insurance or bonding company for a bond to insure that the guardian will use the Protected Person's property only for the Protected Person's benefit.

F. The Final Order

After filing the executed bond with the Register in Chancery, the Register in Chancery will release the final order and provide the guardian with a certified copy. The final order proves the guardian's authority to act on behalf of the Protected Person. The guardian must manage the Protected Person's person and property according to the terms of the final order. Without a final order, medical professionals or financial institutions may refuse to recognize a guardian's authority to act on behalf of the Protected Person. The Court provides one certified ("official") copy of the final order without a fee. However, if the guardian needs duplicates, then the Court charges a fee.

G. After The Final Order

Once the Court enters the final order, a guardian's general responsibilities are to comply with the terms of the final order and act in the best interests of the Protected Person. While specific filing requirements are discussed here briefly, this Handbook also discusses these requirements in greater detail throughout the remaining pages of the Handbook.

1. Proof of Compliance

If the final order requires the guardian to open a guardianship bank account, then the guardian must file a Proof of Compliance within thirty (30) days of the date of the final order. The Proof of Compliance form is provided by the Register in Chancery and must be completed by an official at the bank (with a branch located in Delaware) where the guardian opens the guardianship account. It proves to the Court that the guardian has complied with the final order in opening the guardianship bank account and transferred at least some of the Protected Person’s assets to the account.

2. Inventory

If the final order requires the guardian to file an inventory, then the guardian must file it within 30 days of the date of the final order. The inventory states the location and value of all assets owned by the Protected Person as of the date of the final order. More detailed discussion of the inventory is in Section IV(B)(2). If the actual value of the assets exceeds the value anticipated at the time of the filing of the bond, the Court may order the guardian to file a new bond to cover the actual value of the Protected Person’s assets and income.

3. Annual Update and Medical Statement

A guardian of the person or the property (or both) must file an annual update and medical statement as directed by the Court. The Court provides this form on its website. The due date for annual updates follows the following schedule:

Qtr	If you were appointed between...	...then your Annual Update and Medical Statement is due every year on...
1 st	January 1 st to March 31 st	January 1 st

2 nd	April 1 st to June 30 th	April 1 st
3 rd	July 1 st to September 30 th	July 1 st
4 th	October 1 st to December 31 st	October 1 st

4. Accounting and Monthly Allotment

If the final order requires the guardian to file an accounting, then the guardian must prepare and file the accounting in accordance with the Rules of the Court. More detailed discussion of the accounting is in Section IV(B)(6). If the guardian is required to account, the final order also will set a monthly allotment, which is the amount the guardian may expend each month from the disabled person’s assets and income. The guardian should not exceed the monthly allotment unless a petition to exceed the monthly allotment has been filed with, and approved by, the Court. A Petitioner should request a monthly allotment that adequately covers a Protected Person’s typical monthly expenses. If a Protected Person’s monthly expenses later increase, a petition to increase the monthly allotment may be filed with the Court.

There are some exceptions to the requirement to account, but the Court must expressly waive the accounting requirement. Reasons for waiving the account requirement include: i) the Protected Person does not have substantial assets, and the Protected Person’s only source of income is Social Security, which is handled by a representative payee; ii) the Protected Person lives in a nursing home and has qualified for long-term care Medicaid; or iii) the Protected Person’s income is paid directly or through a Miller Trust to the nursing home to be applied to the cost of caring for the Protected Person. In these types of situations, the Court will generally approve a guardian's request to waive the requirement to file an accounting. Even if the Court waives the accountings, the Guardian must still file an annual update and medical statement.

5. Other Requirements

In addition to the standard filing requirements, the guardian must also obtain Court approval in other circumstances, including:

- Seeking authority for the Protected Person to marry or divorce.
- Terminating the guardianship if the Protected Person sufficiently improves or recovers from the disability that initiated the guardianship (see Section VII regarding termination of guardianship).
- Reporting any change of residence of the Protected Person.
- Reporting any change of contact information for the guardian.
- Reporting the Protected Person's qualification for Medicaid after entry of the final order.
- Reporting within 10 days the death of the Protected Person.

III. POWERS AND DUTIES OF GUARDIAN OF THE PERSON

A. Introduction and Overview

Serving as a guardian requires a person to be diligent in performing his or her duties and patient with and sensitive to the needs of the Protected Person. There are a number of duties the guardian owes to the Protected Person. Basically, the guardian must assure the health, physical, and emotional well-being of the Protected Person. Unless limited by Court order, a guardian has the authority and responsibility, on behalf of the Protected Person, to:

- Determine where he or she lives,
- Provide for his or her care and comfort, including food, clothing, shelter, and social or family connections,
- Obtain services to achieve his or her best possible quality of life,
- Monitor the need for continued guardianship,
- Authorize or refuse medical treatment for him or her,⁴ and
- Take care of his or her clothing, furniture, vehicles, and other belongings.

The guardian of the person also has duties to the Court. The guardian should know the extent and limitations on the authority granted by the Court in the final order and under Delaware law. The guardian must always comply with the Court's orders.

⁴ There are limitations on a guardian's ability to refuse life-saving or life-sustaining medical treatment for a disabled person. See Section III(D).

If the Court appoints separate guardians for the person and the property of the Protected Person, then the guardians will need to cooperate when decisions about the care of the Protected Person involve spending decisions.

B. General Guidelines

The guardian of the person should treat the Protected Person with dignity and assure that others also treat the Protected Person with dignity.

In general, the guardian of the person should try to make decisions the way the Protected Person would have made them when the Protected Person was able. A guardian of the person should be guided by the known wishes, likes, and preferences of an individual, whether expressed before the entry of the final order or during the administration of the guardianship. Whenever possible, the guardian should discuss decisions with the Protected Person. If the Protected Person cannot express his or her preferences, then the guardian of the person should speak to family and friends about the Protected Person's preferences with respect to medical treatment, living arrangements, activities, social contacts, burial arrangements, or any other decision that the guardian must make.

The guardian of the person must substitute the Protected Person's preferences for the guardian's own preferences. The guardian of the person should attempt to maintain relationships of the Protected Person unless doing so would pose a threat of substantial harm to the Protected Person. For example: If baby sister was always Mom's favorite and Mom is happier when she gets to see baby sister, older brother, as guardian, has an obligation to make contact possible no matter what his personal relationship with baby sister is and even if Mom is living in older brother's home.

There are two circumstances when a guardian of the person may depart from the preferences of the Protected Person. First, if the guardian simply cannot determine what the Protected Person would have wanted, the guardian should make decisions that are based on the best interest of the Protected Person, preserving the Protected Person's best possible quality of life. Second, if the guardian knows what the Protected Person would want, but the guardian feels that following the Protected Person's preferences would result in a risk of physical or emotional abuse or other harm, the guardian should make a decision that is in the Protected Person's best interest even though it may be contrary to the Protected Person's wishes. For example, if baby sister has hit Mom or stolen her medications in the past, then the guardian of the person may restrict baby sister's access to Mom to monitored visits with a trusted overseer present. A guardian should not cut off all contact with a person important to the Protected Person unless there is no alternative for avoiding danger.

C. Decisions Regarding Place of Residence

Determining where a Protected Person lives is a common and difficult decision a guardian of the person must address. Unless the final order states otherwise, the guardian should ensure that the Protected Person lives in the setting that best meets the Protected

Person's goals, needs, and preferences. If it is possible for the Protected Person to remain at home safely, the guardian of the person may wish to consider:

- Financial programs such as senior tax credits and reverse mortgages, home repair, weatherization and disability modification programs offered by the various housing authorities, and emergency heat cost assistance offered by utilities and some religious organizations; and
- In-home care services, meal preparation, shopping services, home delivered meals, personal care, home health care, hospice care, respite care, and non-residential adult day programs.

Notwithstanding a Protected Person's strong desire to remain at home, or return to his home, it may be the case that a more restrictive residential environment, such as an assisted care facility, is necessary to meet the Protected Person's needs.

When the guardian determines the Protected Person must move to minimize risk of substantial harm to the Protected Person and to secure his or her best treatment, the guardian must consider a number of factors. The guardian of the person should consider the availability of medical, psychological, and therapeutic services as well as social services, education, training, and vocational services that will maximize the Protected Person's self-reliance and independence.

The guardian should also consider the residential placement's proximity to the people and activities that are important to the Protected Person to ensure they can continue to see their families and friends. If the Protected Person needs assisted living or nursing home care, lists of licensed nursing homes and assisted living facilities are available on the website of the Delaware Division of Long-term Care Residence Protection (available at <http://www.dhss.delaware.gov/dhss/dltcrp/licfac.html>) and rating comparisons are available on www.medicare.gov.

Once a Protected Person is admitted to a residential care facility, the guardian of the person must monitor the quality of care and scope of services provided to the Protected Person. The guardian should attend care plan meetings and visit the care facility regularly to review the Protected Person's chart or records with the staff and generally ensure the Protected Person receives proper care and maintains his or her rights and dignity. If the guardian of the person believes that the Protected Person's rights are being violated or that the Protected Person is subject to neglect or abuse, the guardian must contact the long-term care ombudsman and/or the Division of Long-Term Care Resident's Protection.

If the Protected Person changes residences after the entry of the final order, the guardian must notify the Register in Chancery and comply with any other requirements included in the final order with respect to a change of residence.

D. Health Care and End of Life Decisions

A guardian of the person has the right to make health care decisions for the Protected Person, whether routine or relating to end of life decisions (such as whether to withhold or withdraw life sustaining treatment). The guardian may share medical and other information with those people the Protected Person would want to keep informed, unless doing so would be harmful to the Protected Person. In general, however, the guardian has a duty to maintain the Protected Person's confidential information.

The guardian should make these decisions in consultation with the Protected Person (if possible), his or her written wishes, the Protected Person's physician, and if appropriate, the Protected Person's loved ones. If the Protected Person is able to convey his or her wishes, whether in writing or orally, the guardian should respect these wishes if possible. The guardian should take responsibility for obtaining medical second opinions when necessary. If the Protected Person's current express wishes are contrary to those expressed earlier or another controversy exists relating to medical decisions, the guardian should petition the Court for a decision. In the case of a petition to remove a Protected Person from life support, the Court may require two physician's affidavits with the petition. The Court also may hold a hearing and request testimony from medical professionals who are treating the Protected Person.

IV. POWERS AND DUTIES OF GUARDIANS OF THE PROPERTY

The guardian of the property must ensure that the Protected Person receives funds and benefits to which the Protected Person is entitled and shield the Protected Person from such things as exploitation or inadvertent loss of funds. In most cases, the guardian of the property is also guardian of the person. The Court expects a guardian of the property always to act in and advocate for the best interest of the Protected Person.

The guardian must apply for any private or public benefits on behalf of the Protected Person, such as Medicare, long-term care Medicaid or Veterans Affairs benefits. Such benefits will preserve as much of the Protected Person's assets and income as possible.

By statute, a guardian is not required to use the guardian's own assets for the Protected Person's needs unless there is some independent requirement to do so. For example, a guardian who is also a spouse has a duty to support the Protected Person separate from any guardianship duties. In addition, an individual guardian who does not act in the best interests of the Protected Person may become personally liable for losses to the Protected Person that result from:

- Health care costs charged to the Protected Person because the guardian failed to apply for Medicare/Medicaid or appeal an incorrect denial of benefits;
- Failure to reasonably invest or manage property;

- Failure to pay expenses on time which results in penalties, interest, overdraft fees, etc.; and
- Damage to an asset of the Protected Person because it was not maintained, stored in a safe location or manner, or properly insured.

A. Powers of Guardians of the Property

Unless restricted by the Court, the powers of a guardian of the property are broad.

A guardian of the property may exercise the same powers of control over the Protected Person's property as the Protected Person (if competent) could exercise, except the power to create a will. However, the guardian of the property must petition the Court for authority to exercise most specific powers, such as non-routine expenditures, sale of real estate, or other similar actions. The guardian must provide notice to the interested parties when petitioning for authority to exercise such powers.

In general, a guardian of the property, with prior Court approval, has the following authority on behalf of the Protected Person to:

- Make gifts and charitable contributions;
- Convey or release any interest in property;
- Exercise or release the Protected Person's power to act as trustee, personal representative, custodian of minor child, or as holder of a power of appointment;
- Enter into contracts;

- Create trusts of guardianship property;
- Exercise or grant options to purchase securities or other property;
- Name the Protected Person's estate as beneficiary of insurance policies or annuities or to surrender such policies for the cash value;
- Elect a share in the estate of the Protected Person's deceased spouse; or
- Renounce or disclaim any interest in property received through inheritance or by transfer.

B. Duties of Guardians of the Property

After the Court enters the final order, the guardian of the property must 1) locate and control the Protected Person's assets and income, 2) file an inventory of the Protected Person's assets and sources of income with the Court within 30 days of the date of the final order, 3) divide any assets the Protected Person owns jointly with another person, 4) protect and ensure the Protected Person's assets and income are used for the benefit of the Protected Person or the Protected Person's legal dependents, 5) file required federal and state government documents such as tax returns and apply for available government benefits such as Medicare, Medicaid or Veterans Affairs benefits, and 6) unless waived in the final order, file regular accountings of receipts and expenditures from the Protected Person's assets and income. The guardian of property may also 1) sell or otherwise transfer securities and personal property, with prior Court approval, and 2) sell or otherwise transfer real estate with prior Court approval.

1. Locate and Control the Protected Person's Assets and Income.

The guardian must locate all assets and income of the Protected Person and place them into court-approved accounts. A careful review of all of the Protected Person's papers, especially bank statements and prior tax returns, will help identify income-producing assets. With the increase in use of online information, it is important to access the Protected Person's digital accounts, assets, and computer, if any. Any such assets should be included in the inventory and appropriate protective action taken. Each clue should be investigated for property possibly owned by the Protected Person. It may be helpful to send a letter to the local banks to ask whether the Protected Person has any accounts or safe deposit boxes at that bank. A standard form letter explaining that the Court has appointed a guardian for the Protected Person, and the guardian needs the information should bring a prompt reply from all of the local banks. The bank may require a copy of the Order appointing the guardian before releasing information.

In addition, the guardian may have to act as an advocate for the Protected Person in legal proceedings when the Protected Person is a party to litigation that affects the Protected Person's rights such as to quiet title of real estate, or to complete property division in a divorce proceeding.

2. File an Inventory of the Protected Person's

The guardian must file an inventory of the assets and income of the Protected Person within 30 days of the date of the final order. This sometimes confuses people because they have taken the final order and opened a guardianship account. However, opening the guardianship account happens after the final order, so the guardianship account is not listed on the inventory. Instead, the inventory lists accounts and balances as they existed on the date of the final order. The inventory form is available on the Court's website.

The inventory identifies and provides the value of all the property and income of the Protected Person that a guardian knows about, including such things as cemetery plots, life insurance policies (cash or face value), and prepaid funeral arrangements. It is not necessary to list each specific item of tangible personal property, unless the item has significant monetary value, such as an antique, collectible, or other appraisable item. The value of all other items of tangible property may be listed in one entry based upon the guardian's estimate of the property's fair market value.

Each entry in the inventory must include an objective estimate as to the item's value. In addition, if any account or asset is jointly owned by the Protected Person and another person, the inventory must identify the joint owner(s), survivorship interest, and percentage of ownership of any account or asset. Valuing the property listed in the inventory is easy when the asset is a bank account. When the asset is a car, a blue book value would be sufficient.

The guardian must sign the inventory in the presence of a notary or in the presence of Register in Chancery staff. The inventory contains the guardian's sworn statement that the guardian made a diligent inquiry into the property and the estate of the Protected Person and that the inventory contains all assets that the guardian discovered. If the guardian discovers additional assets, the guardian should file an amended inventory.

3. Divide Any Assets the Protected Person Owns Jointly with Another Person

The guardian may need to divide assets owned jointly by the Protected Person and another person. Upon request, the Court may approve the separation, distribution, or re-titling of jointly owned assets. Commonly accepted reasons for allowing the separation of assets include planning for long-term care Medicaid or to allow a spouse to live independently from the supervision of the Court.

4. Protect and Ensure the Protected Person's Assets and Income are Used for the Benefit of the Protected Person or the Protected Person's Legal Dependents

a. Bank and Other Accounts

The guardian must place the Protected Person's funds into an account titled as directed in the final order in an approved bank. The Court requires all guardianship accounts to be titled as "Court of Chancery Guardianship Account for [John Doe, Disabled], [Mary Doe,] Guardian" with the restriction "Withdrawals Only by Order of the Court". In the final order, the Court will establish the amount of money the guardian may withdraw from the account each month without further Court approval. If a necessary expenditure exceeds the monthly allowance, before paying the expenditure the guardian must file another petition for Court approval with notice to or consents from interested parties.

The Court will approve opening the guardianship account at most banks with a Delaware branch; there are some banks that are exceptions, and the Court will not approve credit unions. Checking, savings, and money market accounts and certificates of deposit (“CDs”) do not earn significant interest at the time of this update. Thus, the guardian may need to open an investment, money market, or other account(s) if the Protected Person has substantial liquid assets. Despite statutory authority allowing a guardian to leave assets titled in the name of a nominee (formerly known as street name), the Court requires that CDs and other types of investment accounts be titled to reflect the existence of the guardianship.

Some banks require the guardian to close the Protected Person’s existing accounts and transfer them into the guardianship account(s). Other banks will allow the guardian to retitle an existing account into the name of the guardianship. Still others require the guardian to open both a savings and a checking account, and the bank transfers the amount of the authorized monthly withdrawal into the checking account each month while maintaining a “hold” on the other account. The guardian generally should not liquidate investment accounts (such as stock brokerage accounts) until the Protected Person needs the funds.

In addition to opening guardianship bank accounts, the guardian must notify “depositors” of the new account information so that direct deposits of income can be made into the new account. An example of a depositor is the Social Security Administration, which will require a guardian to apply to be appointed representative payee before processing a request to redirect the deposit. Information about becoming a Representative Payee is available at www.ssa.gov.

b. Protecting Assets

The guardian has a duty to preserve the Protected Person’s assets to the extent possible. The guardian should obtain insurance for property such as houses, personal property, and cars to protect against loss from fire, theft, vandalism, etc. Failing to do so may make the guardian personally liable for any damage or loss that occurs to the Protected Person’s property.

Protecting the Protected Person financially usually requires the guardian to sign one or more contracts at some point. Each signature should be noted as “Guardian” in order to indicate that payment will be made from the Protected Person’s funds and not from the guardian’s own funds. The greatest concern usually arises when a nursing home or long-term care facility asks the guardian to sign as a responsible party. Federal regulations prohibit facilities from requiring a guarantor.

The Court has an extra level of protection related to tort settlements and other claims to be released. The guardian is not automatically authorized to settle or release claims; it must petition to obtain approval from the Court.

c. Spending Assets

Except when a Protected Person is married or responsible for supporting a dependent, all expenditures from the Protected Person's assets and income must be for the benefit of the Protected Person. In cases in which a monthly allotment is set, that amount establishes a limit on what may be spent each month from the Protected Person's assets and income; the guardian does not have to spend that amount in months when the Protected Person's expenses do not warrant it. Conversely, if the Protected Person has extraordinary expenses in a given month, the guardian should file a petition to expend, which will allow the guardian to exceed the monthly allotment in that month. If the Protected Person's expenses routinely exceed the monthly allotment, the guardian should file a petition to increase the monthly allotment.

In cases where the Protected Person has dependent support obligations, the guardian must clearly disclose such obligations to the Court and request sufficient funds from the monthly allotment (in the final order) to accommodate the needs of both the Protected Person and the dependent. Except in those circumstances, payments should not be made from the Protected Person's assets or income for expenses that were not incurred by or on behalf of the Protected Person.

5. File Tax Returns and Other Required Filings

A guardian stands in the shoes of the Protected Person and has the same responsibilities as the Protected Person would have. If the Protected Person must file tax returns, so must the guardian. Tax returns may be required by the IRS even if no tax is due. A guardian should consult with a tax expert to determine the Protected Person's filing and payment requirements.

If the taxes due cannot be paid from the monthly allowance, the guardian must file a petition to expend funds for payment of the taxes or for services related to preparing and filing the tax returns. Obtaining the Court's approval can take time; the guardian should file the petition to expend early to ensure adequate time to receive the Court's order and pay the tax on time. Failure to pay the tax on time may result in the guardian being personally responsible for any penalties and interest due.

A guardian of the property must pay the Protected Person's health insurance premium from the Protected Person's assets and income. The guardian must also investigate whether the Protected Person qualifies for government benefits that would assist in paying for food or medicine. Information about such benefits is available in the Legal Handbook for Older Delawareans, which is listed in the Resources.

The Social Security Administration provides benefits to eligible persons on the basis of age, income, work history, or disability. The Protected Person may be eligible for additional health care related benefits through Medicare and for long-term care through Medicaid. Medicare is a federal health insurance program, primarily providing benefits to those persons age 65 and older or disabled. The Medicare program provides limited coverage of home health care and of nursing home care. There are state, federal and local programs to assist low-income Medicare beneficiaries.

Medicaid is a program jointly funded by the state and federal government that provides benefits to eligible individuals for long-term home health and nursing home care and a variety of other benefits. Eligibility for long-term care Medicaid is based on the Protected Person's countable assets, income, and medical condition. If the Protected Person is a veteran of the United States armed forces, the guardian should investigate whether the Protected Person qualifies for not only medical and prescription assistance but also for veteran's compensation, pensions, or similar assistance available for low-income veterans. Qualifying for government and/or private benefits may require the assistance of an attorney, for which the Court routinely approves payments.

6. File Regular Accountings of Receipts and Expenditures from the Protected Person's Assets and Income (Unless Waived by the Court)

A guardian must keep complete records of the income (interest, pension, dividends) and assets (accounts, stocks, tort settlement) received and spent (how, when and how much) for the Protected Person. A copy of a cancelled check, along with an invoice for payment, is adequate to prove expenses. It should be clear from the receipt or by notation what the expenditure was for, e.g., medication, clothes, etc. Often, the Protected Person's income is direct deposited into the bank account and is usually easily identified on the statement. Other deposits will require supporting documentation. For example, if the guardian sells personal property, the guardian must submit copies of receipts from the auctioneer or consignment shop with the annual accounting. Recording each transaction in one place, such as a check register, at or near the time of the transaction will make the accounting much easier to complete, and can save the time and expense of asking a bank to provide copies of deposits or checks.

If the final order requires the guardian to file an accounting (exceptions for filing accountings are discussed in Section IV(B)(6) above), then the guardian must prepare and file the accounting in accordance with the Rules of the Court. Under the Court's rules, newly appointed guardians must file an accounting nine months after the guardianship order is approved, accounting for the first six months of expenditures of the Protected Person's assets and income. Subsequent accountings are twelve month accountings. The following chart explains the due dates for the accountings:

Qtr	If you were appointed between...	...your first accounting is due for a six month period beginning with the date you were appointed and is due...	...your second and all subsequent accountings are due for a 12 month period beginning where your prior accounting ended and is due...
1 st	January 1 st to March 31 st	On your nine month anniversary	January 1 st

2 nd	April 1 st to June 30 th	On your nine month anniversary	April 1 st
3 rd	July 1 st to September 30 th	On your nine month anniversary	July 1 st
4 th	October 1 st to December 31 st	On your nine month anniversary	October 1 st

The accounting must itemize in detail the income and expenditures of the Protected Person’s property and income. Court rules require the first accounting (covering the first 6 months from the date of the final order) be filed within 90 days after the close of the 6-month period. The guardian must submit accountings for every 12-month period thereafter on the first business day of the calendar quarter of the date of the final order. The Court will send the guardian a notice of the due date of the following accounting. In addition, the Court may direct a guardian to account at any other time that it deems proper. An interested party may review filed accounts and take exception to the accounting.

The guardian must provide the Court with copies of all bank statements, receipts, and proof of expenses listed on the accounting. Failure to provide the required documentation can result in rejection of the accounting and raise issues with respect to the guardian’s continued authority to act in that capacity. There are two more exceptions to the rule that all expenses must be documented. The first arises when the Protected Person lives in a private home. In lieu of requiring the guardian to provide a copy of each grocery receipt, utility bill, mortgage, insurance payment, etc., the guardian may pay a reasonable monthly amount representing the Protected Person's share of normal household expenses to the homeowner without further documentation. The second exception arises when a personal allowance is provided directly to the Protected Person. Neither the guardian nor the Protected Person need account for the Protected Person's personal funds.

If the Court so authorizes, the accounting may include reimbursement from the Protected Person's funds to the guardian for expenses incurred by the guardian on behalf of the Protected Person, including Court costs, filing fees, attorney's fees (such as attorney ad litem's fees), reasonable expenses incurred for the benefit of the Protected Person such as clothing, toiletries, etc. Any such requests for reimbursement must include itemized receipts documenting the expenditure. The guardian may also apply to the Court for commissions (or compensation) for acting as guardian, as discussed in Section VI. The guardian may only take a commission if the Court approves it.

The Court Rules establish the schedules to be included in an accounting. An accounting filed with the Court must include the following schedules:

- The value of the principal (assets) on hand at the time the accounting begins and the manner (nature) of the principal held, e.g., by account number, policy number, etc. For the first accounting, begin with the assets and

- values reported in the inventory. For subsequent accountings, begin with the ending values and assets of the immediately preceding accounting.
- The additions to principal, when made and the source from which they were obtained. For example, if a stock splits or has a stock dividend, the source, nature and value of the item received must be listed and supported by documentation.
 - The income received, when received and from what source.
 - The deductions from principal, when made and for what purpose. In the first accounting, a deduction from principal may simply be a reduction in value from having obtained an appraisal after the date of the final order or from selling an asset the value of which had been estimated for the inventory.
 - The income paid out (expenditures), when paid, to whom and for what purpose. The rule specifies that a guardian is to report what income is paid out, but, in reality, if an asset must be sold to provide funds to pay bills, the expenses may be paid from principal. The expenditure must still be reported and supported by documents.
 - The principal on hand at the time the accounting ends and the manner (nature) of the investment of that principal.

In addition, the guardian must file a list of the names and addresses of interested parties with the account, as well as a notarized affidavit signed by the guardian affirming that the account is accurate. The account itself must be e-filed; the supporting documents must be delivered in hard copy to the Register in Chancery of the county in which the guardianship is located. The guardian may also file waivers of notice and consent to the accounting from interested parties. If the guardian does not file the waivers of notice and consent, after it has reviewed the accounting, the Court will notify the interested parties that the guardian has filed an account. The interested parties then have 30 days to review the account in the Register in Chancery's office and make any objections to the account.

7. Sell or Otherwise Transfer Securities and Personal Property

A guardian has the authority to sell stock or exercise stock rights. Although not specifically required by statute, it is recommended that the guardian file a petition with the Court to approve the sale of stock of a Protected Person before doing so. The Court prefers to know in advance, and some transfer agents (of stocks and securities) will want specific language in an order authorizing the transaction.

The guardian may need to petition the Court for authority to sell the Protected Person's personal property (e.g., such as household contents, automobiles, jewelry, etc.). The Court may want to see an appraisal of the personal property to be sold, unless it is something that is going to be sold in bulk by an auctioneer. The petition should indicate how the property is to be sold, to whom it will be sold, and the amount for which it is to be sold. Petitions to sell are held for 13 days, unless all interested parties consent, and then presented to a judicial officer of the Court for approval. The guardian or his or her attorney may need to appear in Court at a scheduled time to have the petition to sell approved.

8. Sell or Otherwise Transfer Real Estate

First, obtaining authority for a guardian to sell real estate is more complicated than selling personal property. The first step is for the guardian to file a motion to appoint a real estate appraiser. The Court will appoint a licensed, certified appraiser to perform an appraisal within 30 days of entry of the order. The appraiser must be independent of the parties to the sale and disinterested in the transaction. The appraiser must be paid from the guardianship account within 15 days of receiving the appraisal and file proof of payment with the Register in Chancery. If the protected person does not have any available funds in the guardianship bank account, the guardian must notify the Register in Chancery of the financial shortfall in writing within 10 days of receiving the appraisal.

Real estate can be sold at public auction, but it is more often sold privately either by the guardian or by a real estate agent hired by the guardian. When the property is listed for sale, it should be noted that any offer is “subject to the approval of the Court of Chancery.” The guardian is then authorized to market the property at a price so that the selling price is at the appraised value or higher at closing.

Second, when the guardian receives an acceptable offer, the guardian must then file a petition for approval before the sale is completed. The guardian must submit the real estate contract to the Court that states the contract is “subject to the approval of the Court of Chancery.” If the offer is lower than the appraised value, the guardian must include an affidavit explaining the reasoning for selling the property below the appraised value and why accepting the offer is in the best interest of the Protected Person. At a minimum, the guardian should advise the Court about (1) the monthly expenses relating to the real estate, (2) whether the home is vacant, (3) how long the home has been marketed and (4) the number of showings and offers received. The Court will use all of the information to determine whether the lower sale price is acceptable.

In cases where long-term care Medicaid pays benefits on behalf of the Protected Person, notice of the proposed sale also needs to be sent by certified mail, return receipt requested, to the Delaware Attorney General in addition to the interested parties. Petitions to sell real estate are held for 20 days, unless all interested parties consent, and then are presented to the judicial officer for approval.

Third, the guardian must file a “Return of Sale” proving the guardian has deposited the proceeds into the guardianship account. The Court may also require proof that the proceeds have been used in particular ways, for example, paying off a lien secured by the real estate.

Although some Protected Persons may own several parcels of real estate, in most cases, the Protected Person’s home is his or her largest asset. If the Protected Person is no longer living at home and the real estate is sold, the net proceeds are available to pay for the Protected Person’s continuing care expenses. If the Protected Person outlives his or her assets, it may be appropriate to petition the Court to terminate the guardianship of the property.

V. MEDIATION

Mediation is a process by which a neutral person (the mediator) assists two or more parties to a contested guardianship to reach a mutually acceptable solution. The mediator does not make decisions regarding the resolution of the controversy.

Mediation can take place either before the Petitioner files a petition, after the Petitioner files the petition to appoint a guardian (usually prior to the hearing), or at any time after entry of the final order when disputes arise. Mediation may save money and help a family on the path to supporting the Respondent. The earlier in the process that mediation is attempted, the more mediation is likely to save money and avoid further polarization of the families. The Court encourages and frequently orders opposing interested parties to mediate.

A. Before Mediation

In general, if the Court orders mediation, it will either immediately appoint a judicial mediator (i.e., a member of the Court) or give the “opposing parties” time to identify and agree upon a mediator. A mediator may be any person upon whom the parties agree to mediate in the matter and is usually a local attorney. Different mediators may have different approaches or styles of mediation, which may impact how the mediation proceeds. If the opposing parties cannot agree upon a mediator, the Court will appoint one.

The mediator will schedule the mediation and notify the opposing parties of the time and place of the mediation by certified mail with return receipt requested. The mediation may take place at any place upon which the opposing parties agree, including at the courthouse, in the mediator's office, or even in the Respondent's place of residence.

The mediator may request that the opposing parties sign an agreement to mediate, which may define the issues subject to mediation, the obligation of the parties with respect to fees and costs, agreement to the presence of non-participants, and any other matter the mediator deems appropriate. The mediator may direct the parties to provide information or a statement of their position prior to mediation.

B. During Mediation

The opposing parties must attend mediation. The mediator also must send notice of the mediation to all interested parties. All interested parties should be encouraged to participate to avoid later objections to any agreement reached at mediation. The mediator has the discretion to request the presence or availability of any additional person who the mediator believes has knowledge helpful to resolution of the mediation. Further, the mediator may allow interested parties to participate in the mediation by telephone if the interested party does not reside in Delaware or an adjacent county and attendance by that interested party would be difficult. The participation by interested parties is within the discretion of the mediator. No one else may be present for the mediation without the approval of the opposing parties.

To offer the opposing parties an opportunity to resolve their differences without “airing dirty laundry” in the Court, mediation proceedings are private and confidential, unless the mediator discovers evidence of abuse of any person. Mediation participants cannot compel the mediator to testify in Court regarding the discussions or happenings at mediation. If the mediator chooses to speak privately with a mediation participant, the mediator may not reveal information learned to others without the participant’s express permission.

The mediator may also terminate the mediation if the mediator feels that continuing will not result in a resolution or a participant is not mediating in good faith. The opposing parties must participate in good faith.

C. After Mediation

Following the mediation, the mediator will file a report with the Court on the result of the mediation, including whether the parties reached an agreement or are continuing to mediate. If the mediation resulted in a resolution of the conflict between the opposing parties, they will usually sign a written document confirming the terms of the agreement, which the opposing parties then file with the Court. The Court must approve the mediation agreement.

A mediation agreement may include any of the following:

- The Petitioner withdrawing the petition to appoint a guardian;
- The Respondent or other opposing parties withdrawing their objections to the petition;
- Consent of the agreed-upon guardian to rights or responsibilities determined at mediation, which are incorporated into the final order; and
- Allocation among the parties of fees and costs relating to the petition to appoint a guardian, including attorneys' fees (if any), filing fees, or mediation costs; the mediator must report to the Court any such allocation of fees.

D. Costs of Mediation

The cost of mediation depends largely upon agreement among the parties (including the mediator) and whether the mediator is a judicial mediator from the Court or a non-judicial mediator. Non-judicial mediators are compensated at the rate and in the manner agreed upon by the mediation participants. A judicial mediator does not receive compensation, but the Court charges the participants a fee of $1,500 per day (or partial day) of mediation. In addition, a judicial mediator may waive, modify or allocate court costs in light of the participants' economic circumstances or for other good cause and may impose costs of mediation on a participant who the mediator believes failed to mediate in good faith.

If the State of Delaware or a State agency is a party, the portion of the Court costs allocable to the State shall be waived. Unless the parties agree to a different allocation of the costs of mediation, such costs are normally shared equally among the parties participating in mediation. As discussed in Section IV(B)(6), costs of mediation may be recovered from the Protected Person's assets upon approval by the Court.

VI. GUARDIAN COMMISSIONS

There are three categories of persons who may be appointed guardian for an adult: an individual guardian (e.g., family members or friends of the Protected Person), a professional guardian (i.e., businesses that act as guardians), and the Delaware Office of the Public Guardian (“OPG”). The staff of the OPG does not receive compensation or commissions from the Protected Person’s assets. Professional guardians receive compensation from the Protected Person’s assets under Rule 131 based on fee schedules filed with the Court. Individual guardians may receive compensation, or commissions, based on the tables provided in Court Rule 132, but individual guardians must receive Court permission before paying themselves any commission.

Rule 132 provides a schedule to determine compensation for an individual guardian. If an individual guardian wants to receive compensation, Rule 132 provides for commissions based on the value of the Protected Person’s assets and income.

An individual guardian may request an annual income commission calculated as follows:

- 6% of the first $20,000.00 of income;
- 3.5% of the next $10,000.00 of income;
- 3% of the next $270,000.00 of income;
- 2% of all income over $300,000.00.

An individual guardian may request an annual principal commission calculated as follows:

5/10 of 1% of the first $100,000.00 of principal;

3/10 of 1% of the next $100,000.00 of principal;

2/10 of 1% of the next $500,000.00 of principal;

1/10 of 1% of all principal over $700,000.00.

Additional principal commissions may be allowed upon distribution or termination of the guardianship if the total periodic principal commissions taken during the term of the guardianship have not exceeded the amount of commission calculated under the termination rates provided in Rule 132(c). If there are co-guardians of property of the Protected Person, the Court may require them to split a commission depending on the circumstances of the case. Conversely, if the guardian relies on a professional adviser, for example, then the Court may reduce the commission.

If the Protected Person's assets include mortgages and periodic income payments are collected, the guardian may add a commission of 1/4 of 1% of the total face value of all such mortgages. In addition, if the Protected Person's income includes rental payments on real estate, and the guardian collects the payments (rather than a property manager, for example), a commission of 8% of the gross rents received may be charged rather than the income commission rates discussed above.

Guardians are entitled to a minimum commission of $400 for services in any one accounting year, but are not required to take it. A guardian may also receive commissions in excess of the schedules established in Rule 132 if the Court finds the guardian has provided unusual and extraordinary services.

All applications for commissions are made by petition to the Court. The guardian should attach to the petition a calculation supporting the requested amount, ask the Court for approval, and send notice to the interested parties. After the petition is considered and approved by the Court, the guardian may then withdraw the approved funds from the account of the Protected Person.

VII. TERMINATING THE AUTHORITY OF A GUARDIAN

The Court may remove a guardian when A) it appears that the guardianship is no longer necessary, B) the guardian has failed to comply with its duties, including failure to act in the Protected Person's best interest, C) the Protected Person has died, D) the guardianship is transferred to another state or Court, or E) the guardian has died or resigned.

When petitioning to terminate or transfer the guardianship, the Protected Person (if able to comprehend the issue) and all interested parties (including the guardian) must receive notice. Though not required to do so, the Court may conduct a hearing before making a final determination on the petition to terminate the guardianship.

A. Guardianship No Longer Necessary

The Protected Person, or any other person the Court deems to have sufficient interest, may petition to terminate the guardianship when the Protected Person has regained capacity. The Petitioner should submit a physician's affidavit stating that the Protected Person:

Does not have a disability that interferes with the ability to make or communicate responsible decisions regarding health care, food, clothing, shelter, or administration of property.

This is the same physician's affidavit as discussed in Section II(A)(1)(a) above and is available on the Court's website.

If the Protected Person seeks to terminate the guardianship, he or she is entitled to legal representation. On occasion, the Court has appointed counsel to represent the Protected Person in a termination proceeding. The Petitioner must offer credible proof that termination of the guardianship is appropriate. Any party opposing the termination must then prove by clear and convincing evidence that termination is not appropriate.

When the Court terminates the guardianship because the Protected Person has recovered capacity, it enters an order that:

- Terminates the guardianship,
- Restores the guardianship property to the former Protected Person,
- Provides for the payment of costs and expenses incurred during the guardianship, and
- Requires a full accounting from the guardian of the property.

In some cases, where a Protected Person remains incapacitated but his or her assets have been completely expended, a guardian of the property may seek to be relieved of the requirement of filing accountings. In cases where the Protected Person no longer has any assets and receives only income from Social Security, i.e., retirement or disability benefits, the Court may enter an order terminating the guardianship of the property and relieving the guardian of his or her liability under the bond. The guardian must first petition the Court for such relief and provide notice to all interested parties or notarized waivers and consents from all interested parties. A final accounting must be approved before the Court will sign an order terminating a guardianship of the property. In such cases, the guardianship of the person will most likely continue until the death of the Protected Person.

B. Failure of A Guardian to Comply With Duties

The Court may order the guardian to appear at a hearing (i.e., issue a “Rule to Show Cause”) if the Court has reason to believe the guardian has failed to comply with his or her duties. The guardian must show why he or she should not be removed. The Court may order such a hearing if the guardian has failed to:

- File required documents,
- File accountings accurately,
- Amend inaccurate accountings,
- Protect the person’s property from accidental loss,
- Use the Protected Person’s property solely for the Protected Person’s benefit (this can include a guardian reimbursing him or herself from the Protected Person’s assets or income without Court approval), or
- Protect the Protected Person from abuse or neglect (this does not mean a guardian must authorize medical treatment that violates the Protected Person’s implied or express objection or the tenets and practices of a recognized church or religious denomination to which the Protected Person belongs).

Failure of the guardian to comply with his or her duties may result in the Court issuing a judgment requiring the guardian to repay or pay into the guardianship account(s), removing the guardian, and/or appointing a successor guardian. The Court may also refer the case to the Guardianship Monitoring Program, Adult Protective Services, the Division of Long-term Care Residents Protection, the Delaware Department of Justice, or a local law enforcement agency for investigation and potential criminal prosecution.⁵ While the guardian may initially be able to use guardianship assets to pay the cost of obtaining legal advice regarding the guardianship, the guardian generally cannot use guardianship assets to pay for legal representation in defending against charges of failure to comply with duties.

In cases involving failure of a guardian to comply with its duties, the Court will enter an order that:

- Terminates the authority of the guardian being removed,
- Appoints a new guardian, and ⁵ Court of Chancery Rule 180-D created the Guardianship Monitoring Program of the Office of the Public Guardian, which is responsible for the monitoring of the Court's guardianship docket statewide. The Court may refer any guardianship case to the Guardianship Monitoring Program for review or investigation. The Court order referring the case to the Guardianship Monitoring Program specifies the issues or concerns to be investigated. Interested parties raising concerns in a specific guardianship case should put their concerns in writing, (on agency letterhead, if applicable,) and file them with the Register in Chancery. Any questions regarding the Guardianship Monitoring Program should be directed to the Office of the Public Guardian.

- Requires the removed guardian to account for and transfer all the Protected Person's assets and income to the new guardian.

The Court may also require the removed guardian to reimburse the guardianship accounts for costs and expenses incurred in the investigation resulting in the guardian's removal and for missing assets.

C. Death of the Protected Person

The guardian must notify the Court within 10 days of the Protected Person's death. The guardian must also file a petition to terminate the guardianship, but this need not happen within the 10 days. The guardian (or another person) may need to open a probate estate and have a personal representative appointed for probate purposes before filing the petition to terminate the guardianship.

The petition to terminate due to the death of the Protected Person must state the Protected Person's date of death, attach a copy of the death certificate, notify the Court of the personal representative of the estate or attach a small estate affidavit, and submit a proposed order terminating the guardianship. A guardian appointed solely as guardian of the person need only ask the Court to terminate the guardianship and cancel the bond upon the Protected Person's death. The Court provides forms for termination due to death of the Protected Person on its website.

The order to terminate guardianship upon death of the Protected Person:

- Terminates the authority and duties of the guardian,
- Terminates the guardianship itself,
- Requires the guardian to file a final accounting (if the final order required accountings) and transfer the remaining guardianship assets to the personal representative of the Protected Person's estate or heirs (if no probate is required), and,
- Cancel the guardian's bond.

D. Transferring Guardianship To Another State or Court

If the Protected Person's residence changes to another state, then the guardian must transfer the oversight of the guardianship to the new state of residence. To transfer a guardianship, the guardian must petition the Court to authorize the transfer and also petition the appropriate court in the new state of residence to accept the transfer of guardianship.

The Court may order a hearing and will issue a provisional order granting the transfer unless there is a claim that the transfer is not in the Protected Person's best interests. The Court will enter an order confirming the transfer and terminating the Delaware guardianship upon the receipt of an order accepting the guardianship issued by a court in the state receiving the guardianship and any other required documents, such as a final accounting.

E. Resignation or Death of Guardian

A guardian may resign by filing a petition with the Court. If the guardianship continues, the Court will appoint a successor guardian. The resigning guardian must file an accounting and transfer all guardianship assets to the successor guardian or Court-appointed receiver.

If a guardian dies while serving, the personal representative of the deceased guardian's estate must notify the Court and the Protected Person's next of kin of the guardian's death. The personal representative serves as guardian until the Court appoints a successor. The personal representative must file a petition for the appointment of a successor guardian within 60 days of appointment as personal representative if no other interested party has so filed. The personal representative must file an account on behalf of the deceased guardian within 3 months of his or her appointment as personal representative of the deceased guardian's estate.

GLOSSARY

Attorney Ad Litem	The attorney appointed by the Court to represent the Respondent who is the subject of a guardianship petition.
Court	The Court of Chancery has authority to appoint guardians for adults.
Fiduciary	A person to whom property or power is entrusted for the benefit of another.
Final Order	The order appointing the guardian and establishing the powers and duties of the guardian.
Guardianship Monitoring Program	Pursuant to order of the Court, the Program operating under the Office of the Public Guardian conducts routine periodic reviews of guardianship cases and investigates at the Court's request the conduct of a guardian.
In Forma Pauperis	A procedure to obtain a waiver of Court costs for low income individuals.
Interested Parties	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Respondent's spouse or next of kin, • Respondent's agent under a power of attorney or living will, (sometimes called an advance health care directive), • Respondent's executor or alternate executor appointed in a will, • Trustee or trust protector appointed under a trust in which the Respondent has an interest, • Any person primarily responsible in the past six months for the care of the Respondent or the Respondent's finances, and • Any hospital, nursing home, or care facility of any kind (including independent and assisted living), where the Respondent received care during the six months before filing the petition. Include the name of an administrator or other contact person for the facility.
Next of Kin	The person(s) entitled to inherit through the estate of the Respondent if the Respondent died without a will, including the Respondent's spouse, children, parents, siblings, and, if there are none of those, more remote family members.

Opposing Parties	In mediation, the Petitioner and anyone filing opposition to the proposed guardianship or guardian
Plenary Guardianship	Where the final order establishes the guardianship and appoints the guardian without limitations other than those established by law.
Preliminary Order	The order appointing the attorney ad litem and setting a date for the hearing.

RESOURCES

- The Court of Chancery website is www.courts.delaware.gov/chancery/guardianship
- Delaware Volunteer Legal Services, Inc. www.dvls.org or (302) 478-8680.
- The Guide to Services for Older Delawareans and Persons with Disabilities, issued by the Department of Health and Social Services Division of Services for Aging and Adults with Physical Disabilities (DSAAPD) is available at www.delawareadrc.com
- The Legal Handbook for Older Delawareans, which has additional information is available at www.legalhandbookforolderdelawareans.com.