

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
JUNE 1, 2017

The Delaware Administrative Office of the Courts
Names New Leadership Team

Amy Quinlan to take over as State Court Administrator Retired Col. Elmer M. Setting joins as Deputy Court Administrator

The Delaware Judiciary announced today that Deputy State Court Administrator Amy Arnott Quinlan will be taking over as State Court Administrator when Pat Griffin leaves the Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC) on June 30 to take a position as Master in Chancery. The Judiciary also announced that former New Castle County Police Chief Elmer M. Setting has been named Deputy State Court Administrator.

“However hard it is to say goodbye to a trusted friend and leader like Pat Griffin, it is also heartening to know that Pat has on her team a person of deep commitment and talent who is ready to step up. From the get-go, Amy Quinlan has set a tone of professionalism, hard work, and creativity that has served our Judiciary well. On critical issues—including criminal justice reform and Access to Justice—Amy has helped our state make substantial progress and has earned our full confidence. Amy’s experience and commitment will ensure that our trial courts, agency partners, and constituents continue their work with the AOC on joint efforts to further improve Delaware’s excellent justice system without missing a beat,” said Chief Justice Leo E. Strine, Jr. in announcing Quinlan’s promotion to the top administrative job in the Delaware Courts.

The Chief Justice also welcomed Elmer M. Setting to the Delaware Courts family.

“Our Judiciary, and our state as a whole, are fortunate that one of the most thoughtful and effective police chiefs in our state will help lead the Administrative Office of the Courts. We all recognize the vital role law enforcement plays in enforcing the law but too often we ignore the equally important role that law enforcement has in fulfilling the promise of justice in its broadest sense. Colonel Setting’s commitment to empowering his officers to work closely with the communities they serve and protect, and to also promote mutual understanding, exemplifies how vital our police officers are to community harmony and safety.

As our state and Judiciary grapple with important issues—like reforming our approach to bail and using technology to help our criminal justice agencies do their jobs more efficiently and easily—Colonel Setting will make sure that the important voice of our law enforcement community is heard. Equally important for the Judiciary, Colonel Setting has the kind of proven management experience in areas like procurement and personnel to help us serve the public even more efficiently and effectively,” said Chief Justice Strine.

Quinlan and Setting, along with veteran Deputy State Court Administrator Dale Matthews who heads up the Judicial Information Center (the technical support arm of the AOC), will now form the new leadership core of the Administrative Office of the Courts, that helps set Judicial Branch policy and provides centralized administration and support services for all the Delaware Courts and non-judicial agencies within the courts.

Quinlan joined the AOC in 2011 after working as an attorney at Morris James LLP for seven years in their Professional Liability Litigation Practice Group and the Business Litigation Practice Group. Before that, Quinlan was an Associate Attorney at Ashby & Geddes and was a Staff Attorney with Legal Services Corporation of Delaware. At the AOC, Quinlan has served as Chief Legal Counsel and Policy Advisor, and has managed AOC operations, including judicial and staff training, interpreter services, research and statistics, public information, community outreach, and human resources. She has also been deeply involved in a number of Judicial Branch Initiatives including reforms and improvements related to the American College of Trial Lawyers and Delaware State Bar Association’s Joint Study of the Delaware Courts, the Delaware Access to Justice Commission and the Judicial Branch’s process improvement partnership with the University of Delaware’s Alfred Lerner College of Business & Economics. Quinlan is a graduate of Bates College and received her law degree from Boston University.

Elmer M. Setting joins the Delaware Judicial Branch after a 28-year career in law enforcement in Delaware. Setting replaces James W. Wright who retired from the position of Deputy State Court Administrator on May 31 after more than 11 years with the Administrative Office of the Courts. Wright joined the Delaware Courts in 2005 after a 25-year career with the Wilmington Police Department, where he retired as Police Inspector in charge of Uniformed Operations. Setting will report to the State Court Administrator and will focus on security and facility operations in the Delaware Courts and criminal justice initiatives, among other duties.

As Chief of the New Castle County Police, the second largest police force in Delaware with an authorized strength of 400 sworn officers, Setting was also the top administrator for his department, overseeing a $60 million operating budget, a $500,000 capital budget and $2.5 million in grants. During his career with the New Castle County Police, Setting had extensive administrative experience in areas like human resources, training, and procurement in his various roles including as commander of the administrative section, special operations, patrol and criminal investigations, and as public information officer. He also implemented and oversaw a number of management innovations that improved the overall efficiency and effectiveness of the police force, including adopting an intelligence-led, accountability-driven, predictive policing model and a body-worn cameras program.

Setting is a Delaware native, graduate of Alexis I. duPont High School, and U.S. Navy veteran. He first joined the New Castle County Police in 1989 as a Patrol Officer and over the next two decades worked his way up through the ranks before being named Chief of Police in November 2012. He retired from the New Castle County Police in January 2017.

For more information, please contact:
Chief of Community Relations Sean O'Sullivan
(302) 255-0093 or Sean.O'Sullivan@state.de.us