NATURE AND STAGE OF THE PROCEEDINGS

On January 18, 2013, Jeffrey W. Barnes (“Barnes”) was arrested for driving under the influence (“DUI”) (21 Del. C. § 4177) and related charges. (D.I. 1).¹ Barnes was charged by information on March 21, 2013 with DUI, resisting arrest, aggressive driving, U-turn on roadway interfering with traffic, improper lane change, driving across a median, wrong way on a one way, failure to obey a traffic device, failure to stop at a red light and failure to properly use a turn signal. (D.I. 4; A6-9 (Information)). On May 24, 2013, Barnes pleaded guilty to a fifth offense DUI in exchange for dismissal of the balance of the charges. (D.I. 16; A10-14 (Sent. Order)). Superior Court imposed a sentence of five years at supervision level 5, suspended after 18 months for 18 months supervision level 3. A15-20 (Corrected Sent. Order). The Sentence Order designated this sentence as “NON-TIS,” i.e., not subject to the Truth in Sentencing Act of 1989 (“TIS Act” or “Act”).²

On December 17, 2013, the Board of Parole granted Barnes parole, releasing him after he had served just over 6 months of his sentence.³ On December 23, 2013, the State filed an emergency motion to correct an illegal sentence. (D.I. 23; A21-80 (State’s Emergency Mot. to Correct an Illegal Sentence)). The next day, the Superior Court held an office conference, during which it advised it was not inclined to grant the State’s motion. (D.I. 24). The court, however, expressed its willingness to consider a petition for a writ of mandamus and set a hearing for December 27, 2013 to allow the State, Barnes and the Board of Parole to present their positions if the State filed a petition that same day. (D.I. 24; A85-86). Therefore, that day, the State filed a petition for a writ of mandamus in Barnes’s criminal case seeking review of the Board of Parole’s decision to release Barnes on parole. (D.I. 24). By letter dated December 26, 2013, counsel for the Board of Parole advised the court that: “the Board has reviewed the motion filed by the Delaware Department of Justice Criminal Division in this case. Following review and consultation with counsel, the Board has decided that it does not oppose this motion. Therefore, the Board does not intend to appear at tomorrow’s hearing on this matter.” (SA8).

During the December 27, 2013 hearing, the court heard argument from the State and Barnes, and then continued the hearing for two weeks to allow Barnes to retain counsel. (D.I. 26). When the Office of the Public Defender entered its appearance on behalf of Barnes, the court granted Barnes's request to continue the hearing for an additional week. (D.I. 31).

On January 6, 2014, the State filed a petition for a writ of mandamus as a separate civil action, Case No. S14M-01-002 (THG).⁴ (A93-97). Thereafter, Barnes filed motions to intervene in and to dismiss the State's civil mandamus petition. (A92). Superior Court held a hearing on January 24, 2014, during which it addressed the pending pleadings; Superior Court denied the State's emergency motion to correct an illegal sentence and granted, in part, the State's petition for a writ of mandamus.⁵ (D.I. 36). Superior Court directed the Board of Parole to reverse its decision granting parole to Barnes.⁶ (A105). Barnes was immediately taken into custody. (D.I. 36; A105).

On February 5, 2014, Barnes filed a timely notice of appeal. The State timely filed a notice of cross appeal as of right under 10 Del. C. § 9902(e) on March 4, 2014. On April 4, 2014, Barnes filed a notice of voluntary dismissal of his appeal. An opening, answering, and reply brief were filed addressing the State's cross-appeal, and a panel of this Court heard oral argument on November 12, 2014.

The next day, the Court issued an Order rejecting Barnes's claim that the Court lacked jurisdiction and appointing the Public Defender to "take the other side of the central issue" of whether a felony DUI is covered by the Truth In Sentencing Act of 1989. The Court further indicated that it will hear argument en banc after completion of full briefing. This is the State's opening brief.

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

I. Superior Court erred as a matter of law when it found the Truth in Sentencing Act of 1989 inapplicable to DUI offenses. The TIS Act applies to “all crimes” committed after June 30, 1990, including those in Title 21. The provisions of Title 11 amended by the TIS Act unambiguously applied to Title 21 offenses both before and after enactment of the Act. In addition, the provisions of Title 11 regarding good time credit, parole and offense classifications and sentence ranges, which were amended by the Act, must be read in pari materia with provisions of other Titles that were subject to them prior to enactment of the Act. The General Assembly expressed no intention to exclude offenses outside of Titles 11 and 16 from the effect of the TIS Act’s changes to the Criminal Code. To the contrary, the General Assembly specifically stated that the TIS Act applies to “all crimes” committed after June 30, 1990. Moreover, legislative enactments since passage of the TIS Act, which specifically address sections amended by the TIS Act, support the conclusion that the General Assembly intended Title 21 offenses to be subject to the Act.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Criminal Offense

On January 18, 2013, Trooper Leonard Demalto of the Delaware State Police saw Barnes make a U-turn and begin to travel southbound in the northbound lanes of Coastal Highway in Rehoboth Beach, Delaware.⁷ Barnes continued driving southbound in the northbound lane until a vehicle approached him driving in the opposite (and correct) direction, causing Barnes to swerve across the concrete median and land forcefully in the southbound lanes. In fact, Barnes's vehicle produced visible sparks when it landed. When Trooper Demalto activated his vehicle's lights and siren, Barnes began to swerve over to the side of the road, but did not stop. Instead, Barnes turned onto Old Landing Road, slowed, but did not stop, and then turned into the Walmart parking lot, where he finally brought his vehicle to a stop. Barnes then fled on foot. Trooper Demalto pursued Barnes on foot, yelling loudly throughout the pursuit, "Stop. Police." Barnes did not stop until Trooper Demalto tackled him. Even then, Barnes refused to lie on his stomach and place his hands behind his back. After wrestling with Barnes, Trooper Demalto forced him onto his stomach, secured his hands behind his back, and handcuffed him. The passenger in Barnes's car confirmed that Barnes had been driving. Barnes's blood alcohol concentration was .18. (A18).

⁷ Because Barnes pled guilty, the facts of the offense are taken from the affidavit of probable cause supporting the arrest warrant. (SA5-6).

The Sentence

In exchange for the dismissal of the balance of the charges, Barnes pleaded guilty on May 24, 2013 to a fifth offense DUI. (D.I. 16; A6-9; A15-20). Superior Court immediately sentenced Barnes pursuant to 21 Del. C. §§ 4177(d)(5) and (8).⁸

As noted by Superior Court:

Pursuant to 21 Del. C. § 4177(d)(8), the Court could suspend half of defendant's minimum sentence of 3 years for probation once it imposed the conditions required of 21 Del. C. § 4177(d)(9). Thus, the Court sentenced him to 5 years at Level 5, and suspended defendant's Level 5 sentence after 18 months at Level 5 for 18 months at Level 3 probation. Pursuant to a corrected order dated June 12, 2013, defendant was not required to report to Level 5 until June 21, 2013.⁹

Barnes's Sentence Order states that his sentence is "NON-TIS." (A15).

In August, 2013, Barnes filed an application to the Board of Parole for early release.¹⁰ (A70, 755). The State opposed. (A95). The Board (implicitly taking the position that it had the authority to parole a defendant for Title 21 offenses because the TIS Act does not apply to Title 21) granted Barnes parole on December 17, 2013 after he had served just over six months of his sentence.¹¹ In response, the State filed an emergency motion to correct an illegal sentence, in which it argued that Barnes’s sentence was subject to the Truth in Sentencing Act, and therefore, not subject to parole. (A21-25).

Superior Court declined to rule on the State’s motion, noting: “My reading of it and the case law and my personal experience on SENTAC that it has not been, felony DUIs have not been considered TIS sentences. . . . The felony DUIs came into existence six years after TIS came into effect.” (A82-83). The court suggested instead, that it would be willing to consider a writ of mandamus. (A83).

The State filed a petition for a writ of mandamus, and after argument at two hearings, the court granted the State’s petition, but denied its motion to correct an illegal sentence as meritless.¹² The court held that a DUI sentence is non-TIS; therefore, “the Board of Parole has authority over . . . DUI sentences and the repealed non-TIS statutes apply.”¹³ The court further held, however, that the Board had no discretion to grant parole to a defendant serving the mandatory portion of his sentence because he must serve any statutory mandatory period of incarceration before he is eligible to apply for parole.¹⁴ Although not raised in either the State’s petition or its motion, the court also found that Barnes’ mandatory sentence could be reduced by good time under 11 Del. C. § 4381.¹⁵

ARGUMENT

THE TRUTH IN SENTENCING ACT OF 1989 APPLIES TO THE CRIME OF DRIVING UNDER THE INFLUENCE.

Question Presented

Whether Superior Court erred as a matter of law in finding the Truth in Sentencing Act of 1989 inapplicable to driving under the influence crimes.¹⁶ (D.I. 36; A99-102).

Scope of Review

This Court reviews statutory construction issues de novo “to determine if the Superior Court erred as a matter of law in formulating or applying legal precepts.”¹⁷

Merits of the Argument

The TIS Act eliminated parole for all Delaware crimes.¹⁸ Superior Court incorrectly concluded that Barnes’s DUI sentence was “non-TIS” and, in so doing, imposed an illegal sentence. A sentence is illegal if it “is ambiguous with respect to the time and manner in which it is to be served, is internally contradictory, omits a term required to be imposed by statute, is uncertain as to the substance of the sentence, or is a sentence which the judgment of conviction did not authorize.”¹⁹ Barnes’s May 24, 2013 sentence is illegal because it designated Barnes sentence as “non-TIS” despite the fact that Title 21 offenses, including DUI, are subject to the provisions of the Truth in Sentencing Act. The non-TIS designation rendered the sentence uncertain as to its substance, ambiguous with respect to the time and manner in which it was to be served and was not authorized by the judgment of conviction.²⁰ Because Barnes’s sentence was classified as non-TIS, the Board of Parole concluded that Barnes was eligible for parole after he had served one-third of his sentence. In considering the State’s emergency motion to correct Barnes’s illegal sentence and petition for a writ of mandamus ordering the Board of Parole to rescind Barnes’s parole, Superior Court incorrectly found that DUI sentences are “non-TIS,” and incorrectly concluded that the Board of Parole has jurisdiction over DUI sentences.

¹⁶ Barnes, at *2 (Ex. A).

Wolf*, 90 F.3d 191, 194 (7th Cir. 1996) (finding order to pay restitution to “non-victims” would be a sentence that the judgment of conviction did not authorize when statute required restitution be paid only to victims); United States v. Wainwright, 938 F.2d 1096, 1098 (10th Cir. 1991) (holding restitution order encompassing losses not stemming from charges resulting in conviction was illegal sentence because it was unauthorized by the restitution statute).

A. Sentencing pursuant to the Delaware Criminal Code

Delaware Criminal Code

On July 6, 1972, the Delaware General Assembly passed the modern day manifestation of the Delaware Criminal Code, which became effective April 1, 1973.²¹ While most crimes are defined in Title 11 (the Criminal Code), many other titles – indeed, almost all other titles – also define criminal offenses.²² The provisions of the Criminal Code apply not only to the construction of and punishment for any offenses committed after July 1, 1973 set forth in Title 11, but also to the construction of offenses defined in other statutes, “[u]nless otherwise expressly provided, or unless the context otherwise requires.”²³ The Delaware Criminal Code with Commentary further explains that the Code is “expressly made applicable, where relevant, to offenses defined elsewhere in the Delaware Code,” and specifically mentions that motor vehicle offenses are codified elsewhere in the ²¹ See 58 Del. Laws, ch. 497; Chance v. State, 685 A.2d 351, 355 (Del. 1996) (discussing history of the passage of the Delaware Criminal Code).

²² See, e.g., 2 Del. C. § 181; 3 Del. C. §§ 7105, 7203, 8713, 8719; 4 Del. C. ch. 9; 5 Del. C. §§ 2116, 2317, 2745; 6 Del. C. § 2563; 7 Del. C. § 6013; 8 Del. C. §§ 397, 513; 9 Del. C. §§ 8615, 9113; 13 Del. C. §§ 102-04, 112, 931; 14 Del. C. § 4110; 15 Del. C. ch. 23; 16 Del. C. §§ 2304, 2513, 4752-4764; 17 Del. C. §§ 513, 515; 18 Del. C. § 106; 20 Del. C. § 3125; 21 Del. C. §§ 4177, 4201, 4202; 23 Del. C. § 2302; 24 Del. C. §§ 905, 2308; 28 Del. C. § 701-705; 29 Del. C. §§ 5404, 5805; 30 Del. C. §§ 571-574, 2119; 31 Del. C. §§ 1003, 1004, 3913. This is only a sampling of crimes defined outside of Title 11. It would require a painstaking search to identify all crimes defined outside of Title 11, which is unnecessary for present purposes and may be why the General Assembly believed it sufficient to say that the TIS Act applies to “all crimes.”

²³ 11 Del. C. § 103.

Delaware Code.²⁴ The Criminal Code explicitly provides that the penalty provisions in Chapter 42 of Title 11 apply to all offenses found in the Delaware Code.²⁵ Thus, while some of the criminal offenses defined outside of Title 11 contain specific sentencing provisions, the offenses defined outside of Title 11 are governed by the sentencing and criminal procedure laws contained within Title 11, including chapters 2-4 and 17-96.

SENTAC/TIS Act

The Delaware Sentencing Accountability Commission (“SENTAC”) was established on July 18, 1984,²⁶ and its composition, purpose, and powers are codified within Title 11, Chapter 65, Subchapter X. It is the “overall purpose of [SENTAC] to establish a system which emphasizes accountability of the offender to the criminal justice system and accountability of the criminal justice system to the public.”²⁷ SENTAC was charged with developing “accountability levels” of punishment and establishing “detailed, objective criteria” to assign offenders to an accountability level.²⁸ SENTAC was also charged with “recommend[ing] to the Governor and the General Assembly legislation necessary for the implementation of the sentencing guidelines.”²⁹

To “meet the objectives of SENTAC legislation,” on July 17, 1989, the General Assembly passed the Truth in Sentencing Act with the goal of providing more certainty in the length of sentences imposed on defendants.³⁰ The TIS Act made it clear that it took effect “with respect to all crimes which are committed as of 12:01 a.m., June 30, 1990 or thereafter.”³¹ The Act abolished parole and amended, among other things: sections 4381-4384 of Title 11 (the provisions regarding good time credit); sections 4201 and 4202 of Title 11 (the provisions regarding felony and misdemeanor classifications); and sections 4204-4207 of Title 11 (the provisions regarding authorized disposition of convicted inmates and establishing, among other things, the accountability levels of punishment and sentence ranges for felonies, misdemeanors and violations).³²

Importantly, the Act amended 11 Del. C. § 4205 to provide “[n]o sentence to Level V incarceration imposed pursuant to this Section is subject to parole.”³³ The Act also added a new section 4354 in Subchapter IV (Parole) of Chapter 43 of Title 11, which provides: “No sentence imposed pursuant to the provisions of the Truth in Sentencing Act of 1989, shall be subject to parole under the provisions of this subchapter.”³⁴ In addition, the TIS Act changed the method for calculating good time: “Good time credits on a sentence imposed after the Act are earned at a significantly lesser rate than under a sentence imposed prior to the Act.”³⁵

When the TIS Act was enacted, the General Assembly is presumed to have known the existing laws.³⁶ As explained above, criminal offenses defined outside of Title 11 were subject to the Title 11 parole and good time provisions in effect prior to the enactment of the TIS Act. Thus, when the TIS Act changed the parole and good time provisions, these changes were applicable to crimes defined outside of Title 11. Indeed, as the General Assembly specifically pronounced: “The provisions of this Act shall take effect with respect to all crimes which are committed as of 12:01 a.m., June 30, 1990 or thereafter.”³⁷ Thus, while the TIS Act itself only amended Titles 11 and 16, those amendments affect all crimes in the Delaware Code, regardless of the title under which those crimes are listed.

³⁷ TIS Act, § 3 (emphasis added) (A109).

To effectuate the bill’s application to “all crimes,” the General Assembly need not have referenced every single title of the Delaware Code to which the title 11 sentencing/parole changes applied.³⁸ The TIS Act, titled “An Act to Amend Title 11 and Title 16 to Provide For Truth in Sentencing” was, and is, sufficiently informative to place those interested in the general subject matter on notice of its application to Delaware Sentencing. It is not unusual that the title of the Act did not refer to titles – such as title 21 – which were not being amended, even though the bill’s amendments would apply to those titles. It is typical that bills that amend title 11 provisions regarding sentencing, good time, etc. only reference title 11 in the bill’s title, but generally apply to all offenses, regardless of the title in which the offense is codified.³⁹

³⁸ In re Opinion of the Justices, 177 A.2d 205, 208 (1962) (stating Article II, Section 16 of the Delaware Constitution “does not require the title of a bill to be an index of its details, or a synopsis of the means by which the bill’s object is to be accomplished. The requirements of the section are satisfied if the title of the bill is sufficiently informative so as to put on notice parties interested in the general subject matter in such manner as would lead them to inquire into it.”). See also fn 22, supra, identifying a sampling of criminal offenses located throughout almost all other titles of the Delaware Code.

Title 21/DUI

When the TIS Act was passed in 1989, DUIs were unclassified misdemeanor offenses.⁴⁰ In 1995, the General Assembly amended 21 Del. C. § 4177 to add felony DUI offenses.⁴¹ In 2009, the maximum penalties for felony offenses were expanded,⁴² and, effective July 1, 2012, the minimum penalties for felony DUI offenses were dramatically increased.⁴³ Thus, for example, prior to July 1, 2012 a felony DUI offender – regardless of the number of prior offenses – faced a minimum penalty of six months and parole eligibility was, at the most, an infrequent consideration. Felony DUI offenders, such as Barnes, now serve longer terms of incarceration and are subjected to more intense rehabilitative efforts; as such, parole eligibility is now a more regular consideration in these sentences.

Although DUIs were misdemeanor offenses when TIS was enacted, Title 21 contained a number of felony offenses.⁴⁴ For example, just prior to the passage of the TIS Act, the unspecified felony offense of receiving or transferring a stolen vehicle, 21 Del. C. § 6704 (1988) (A141), was considered a class E felony under

11 Del. C. § 4201 (1988) (A134), and was subject to the maximum penalties for class E felony offenses set forth in 11 Del. C. § 4205 (1988) (A136). Misdemeanor classifications were also governed by the Criminal Code, but the sentences for the many unclassified misdemeanors located outside of Title 11 remained in “accordance with the sentence specified in the law defining the offense.”⁴⁵ This interplay of the plain language of these statutes evinces the TIS Act’s application to DUI offenses.

B. The TIS Act Applies to All Crimes.

This Court has not addressed the issue of whether Title 21 offenses are subject to the TIS Act. However, in *Crosby v. State*⁴⁶ this Court stated: “The General Assembly has now prospectively abolished parole as a basis for early release. Pursuant to the Truth-in-Sentencing Act of 1989, a sentence of Level V incarceration for any crime committed after June 29, 1990 is no longer subject to the parole provisions. . . .” In its analysis, the Court made no distinction between Title 11 and Title 16 offenses and crimes defined throughout the Code.⁴⁷ Instead, this Court noted that “the 1989 Truth-in-Sentencing Act completely eliminated parole.”⁴⁸

Nonetheless, prior to the decision in this case, Superior Court twice opined that the TIS Act does not apply to Title 21 offenses.⁴⁹ The first case, *State v. Clyne*⁵⁰ (“Clyne”), held that a defendant’s good time credits should be calculated under the law in existence prior to the passage of the TIS Act because the defendant’s DUI conviction was not encompassed in the Act. No rationale was provided to support the court’s determination. As a result of its erroneous conclusion, the court posited that the very statutes replaced by the TIS Act applied to Clyne’s sentence.⁵¹ Nearly a decade later, in *Owens v. State*⁵² (“Owens”), the court, relying in part on Clyne, found that a DUI sentence is a “non-TIS” sentence.⁵³ These Superior Court decisions, and the decision below, are premised on the unsupported assumption in Clyne that DUI sentences are not subject to the TIS Act and are inconsistent with Delaware law. Like Superior Court, SENTAC has taken the position that Title 21 offenses are “not covered by Truth in Sentencing.”⁵⁴ These decisions/positions are wrong; the TIS Act unambiguously applies to “all crimes,” including DUI. Even if the TIS Act is ambiguous, principles of statutory construction reveal that the TIS Act applies to DUI.

“In construing a statute, a Court must first look to the text of the statute in its context to determine if it is ambiguous.”⁵⁵ “If, however, the statute is unambiguous and an application of the literal meaning of its words would not be unreasonable, then there is no basis for an interpretation of those words by the court.”⁵⁶ The TIS Act, by its terms, is unambiguous. A stated purpose of the TIS Act is “[t]o achieve truth in sentencing by assuring that the public, the State and the Court will know that the sentence imposed by the Court will be served by the defendant; and that, the defendant will know what the actual effect of the sentence will be.”⁵⁷ The Act abolished parole for all crimes and clarified the application of good time to criminal sentences. The Act unambiguously provides that it is applicable to “all crimes which are committed as of 12:01 a.m., June 30, 1990 or thereafter.”⁵⁸ “Where the intent of the legislature is clearly reflected by unambiguous language in the statute, the language itself controls.”⁵⁹

Driving Under the Influence is a “crime” expressly subject to the TIS Act. Title 11 sets forth the paradigm for classifying, for purposes of sentencing, all crimes and offenses within the Delaware Code. “Any offense defined by statute which is not specifically designated a felony, a class A misdemeanor, a class B misdemeanor or a violation shall be an unclassified misdemeanor.”⁶⁰ Moreover, “[n]o offense is a violation unless expressly declared to be a violation in this Criminal Code or in the statute defining the offense.”⁶¹ Thus, DUI is a “crime” to which the TIS Act unambiguously applies.

“If uncertainty exists, . . . rules of statutory construction are applied. To that end, the statute must be viewed as a whole, and literal or perceived interpretations which yield mischievous or absurd results are to be avoided.”⁶² The doctrine of in pari materia is a well-settled rule of statutory construction.⁶³ “Under this rule, related statutes must be read together rather than in isolation, particularly when there is an express reference in one statute to another statute.”⁶⁴ The purpose of the doctrine of in pari materia “is to ascertain and carry into effect the intention of the Legislature, and it proceeds upon the supposition that the several statutes relating to one subject were governed by one spirit and policy, and were intended to be consistent and harmonious in their several parts and provisions.”⁶⁵

Although the only provisions specifically amended by the Act are contained in Title 11 and Title 16, many of the provisions in Title 11 that were amended, including those regarding parole, good time and sentencing, apply to all offenses. Prior to the passage of the TIS Act, the Criminal Code provisions regarding good time credit, parole and offense classifications and sentence ranges applied to all crimes, including Title 21 offenses.⁶⁶ In fact, those parole and good time early release provisions predated the 1973 overhaul of the Criminal Code.⁶⁷ A person confined to a correctional facility was eligible for parole if he had served one-third

C.* s 6911 in a vacuum; it must be read as a part of Chapter 69, Title 29, Delaware Code since 29 Del. C., Ch. 69 was enacted as an entire chapter.”).

of the term imposed by the court.⁶⁸ In addition, a person committed to the Department of Correction could be released early for good behavior.⁶⁹

Neither form of early release was conditioned on the statute pursuant to which the defendant had been sentenced (except where a statute explicitly prohibited early release), but was instead dependent upon whether the defendant was incarcerated at a facility operated by the Delaware Department of Correction. Therefore, before passage of the TIS Act, a person incarcerated for offenses defined in titles other than Title 11 were also eligible for early release on parole or for good behavior under 11 Del. C. §§ 4346 (1988) and 4381 (1988). In fact, the Superior Court in Clyne applied these repealed provisions of Title 11 to a Title 21 crime.⁷⁰

Prior to passage of the TIS Act, the sentencing classifications and maximum penalties in the Criminal Code governed all offenses found in the Delaware Code.⁷¹ Section 4205 of Title 11 provided for maximum penalties for the various classes of felonies. Section 4201 stated: “Any offense defined outside this Criminal Code which is declared to be a felony without specification of the classification thereof shall be deemed a class E felony, and, notwithstanding any other provision as to punishment, such offense shall be subject to the provisions of section 4205 of this Criminal Code.” The TIS Act amended section 4201 to state: “Any crime or offenses which is designated as a felony but which is not specifically given a class shall be a Class G Felony and shall carry the sentence provided for said class felony.”⁷²

None of the amendments in the TIS Act to those provisions in sections 4381-4384 and sections 4201, 4202 and 4204-4207 of Title 11 – sections that applied to offenses outside of Title 11 – state that they should no longer apply to those offenses, nor do they otherwise exclude Title 21 offenses.⁷³ The General Assembly expressed no intention to exclude offenses outside of Titles 11 and 16 from the effect of the TIS Act’s changes to the Criminal Code.⁷⁴ To the contrary, consistent with the fact that Chapter 42 of Title 11 applies to sentences imposed for any violation of a criminal statute found anywhere within the Delaware Code, the General Assembly specifically said that the Act applies to “all crimes” committed on or after June 30, 1990.⁷⁵ It does not logically follow that once the provisions were amended, the legislature intended that the amended provisions would no longer apply to offenses outside of Titles 11 and 16.⁷⁶

Moreover, the TIS Act contains “transition provisions” to address when a person is serving a non-TIS sentence and then receives a subsequent TIS sentence.⁷⁷ If the General Assembly had intended that a future sentence for Title 21 crimes would not be subject to the TIS Act, it would not have denominated the provisions as “transition.” Had the General Assembly intended to exclude Title 21 offenses from application of the TIS Act, it would have been necessary to account for the order in which a future non-TIS Title 21 sentence would be served when an inmate also has a TIS sentence. They did not. Again, this shows that the General Assembly intended the TIS Act to apply to Title 21 crimes.

Superior Court’s conclusion in Clyne that DUI offenses were not encompassed by the TIS Act resulted in a perplexing outcome. Felony DUI offenses were not added to Title 21 until 1995, six years after passage of the TIS Act.⁷⁸ In concluding that the TIS Act did not apply to DUIs, the court revived Title 11 provisions that had been repealed more than a decade earlier and applied them to Title 21 offenses that had not existed prior to passage of the TIS Act. The TIS

Act amended Title 11 “by striking [and replacing] Sections 4381, 4382, 4383 and 4384 in their entirety. . . .”⁷⁹ The Act clearly established its prospective application: “[t]he provisions of Title 11 and Title 16, which are repealed by this Act shall remain in force and effect for the purpose of trial and sentencing for all crimes which occur prior to 12:01 a.m., June 30, 1990.”⁸⁰ The Act did not include any condition under which the stricken sections would apply prospectively to any offenses committed after June 30, 1990.

The General Assembly’s enactments since passage of the TIS Act also support the conclusion that it intended Title 21 offenses to be subject to the TIS Act. Section 713 of Title 21, which was added to Title 21 in 2009,⁸¹ provides:

*[n]otwithstanding § 4203 of Title 11, any criminal offense described in § 709(e)(1) to (e)(16) of this Title, shall be a violation. The provisions of § 4207 of Title 11 notwithstanding, the Court may impose a sentence in accordance with the sentence specified in the law defining the offenses or a law in this title specifying a sentence for the offenses, and, if no sentence is so specified, the court may impose a fine up to $575.*⁸²

Driving Under the Influence is “an offense described in § 709(e)(1) to (e)(16),” specifically, it is described at § 709(e)(12) of Title 21. Thus, the 2009 amendment rendered a first and second DUI offense, an unclassified misdemeanor.⁸³ If, however, the TIS Act, including its amendment to 11 Del. C. §§ 4203 and 4207, did not apply to Title 21 offenses, there would have been no need for the 2009 amendment.

Additionally, in amending 21 Del. C. § 4177 to add felony DUI offenses, the General Assembly included reference to the TIS Act felony sentencing provisions found in Title 11.⁸⁴ 21 Del. C. § 4177(d) provides that minimum sentences for DUI felony convictions may only be suspended as set forth in section 4177(d), “the provisions of § 4205(b) . . . of Title 11 or any other statute to the contrary notwithstanding. . . .” Thus, the statute under which Barnes was convicted specifically contemplates that, absent a statutory exception permitting deviation, a DUI sentence is subject to the TIS Act. If the TIS Act did not apply to crimes listed under Title 21, there would have been no need to specifically exempt DUI sentencing from the requirements of § 4205(b).⁸⁵ Similarly, in other contexts where the General Assembly intended to exclude Title 21 from the application of a ⁸³ 21 Del. C. § 4177(d)(1) and (2). Subsequent offenses are specifically declared to be felonies, and the level of each felony is declared within the statute, 21 Del. C. § 4177(d)(2)-(7), in conformity with the felony classifications delineated in 11 Del. C. § 4201.

⁸⁴ 70 Del. Laws, ch. 62.

Title 11 provision regarding sentencing, it has specifically excluded Title 21 in the language of the section.⁸⁶

In 2010, the General Assembly passed a bill intended to ensure consistent application of the TIS Act good time provisions to all offenses, other than a life sentence, regardless of “any previously imposed statutory limitations set forth in Title 11, Title 16 or Title 21.”⁸⁷ Prior to the amendment, courts did not allow inmates to earn good time if the statute pursuant to which they had been sentenced prohibited early release.⁸⁸ An additional effect of the amendment, however, was that it superseded Clyne and clarified that the TIS Act good time provisions applied to Title 21 offenses.⁸⁹

The court and SENTAC created exclusion of certain offenses from the TIS Act – most notably Title 21 offenses – has led to unnecessary legal confusion and the premature release of convicted felony offenders like Barnes. Although one issue was resolved regarding the calculation and application of good time credits

⁸⁷ See 77 Del. Laws, ch. 406 (amending 11 Del. C. § 4381) (A130).

with the passage of Senate Bill 320 in 2010, confusion still abides regarding application of other TIS Act provisions to offenses outside of Titles 11 and 16. As exemplified in this case, the Board of Parole believes it has jurisdiction over DUI offenders, and it has exercised that jurisdiction to prematurely release repeat DUI offenders in contravention of the legislative intent.

Although Superior Court in its decision below found that the Board of Parole had no authority to release a DUI offender during his minimum mandatory term, it incorrectly concluded that the Board of Parole has any jurisdiction over Title 21 offenders. If, for example, a court sentenced a repeat DUI offender to a term of incarceration exceeding his minimum mandatory sentence, under the Superior Court's decision, the Board of Parole could exercise its authority to release him early after he had served his minimum sentence. Recently, the General Assembly amended 21 Del. C. § 4177 to strengthen sentences for repeat DUI offenders.⁹⁰ Exclusion of Title 21 offenses from the TIS Act directly contravenes the legislative intent to create strong, predictable sentences for DUI offenders. Moreover, such exclusion defeats the legislature's stated intent with the passage of the TIS Act to "assur[e] that the public, the State and the Court . . . know that the sentence imposed by the Court will be served by the defendant."⁹¹ Consequently, the Superior Court erred in denying the State's motion to correct an illegal sentence wherein it sought removal of the non-TIS designation from Barnes's sentence.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the judgment of the Superior Court, denying the State's motion to correct an illegal sentence, should be reversed.

ORDER

GRAVES, J.

*1 Pending before the Court is a petition brought by the State of Delaware (“the State”) seeking the issuance of a writ of mandamus to the Board of Parole directing the Board of Parole to reverse its decision to release defendant from Level 5 custody.¹ This is my decision regarding several issues raised by the petition.

1 The State's Petition seeking a Writ of Mandamus originally was filed in the criminal matter, State of Delaware v. Jeffrey W. Barnes, Def. ID# 1301013137. It has since been filed as a civil action: State of Delaware v. Delaware Board of Parole, C.A. No. S14M-01-002. This decision will be docketed in both the criminal case and the civil case.

On May 24, 2013, defendant Jeffrey W. Barnes (“defendant”) pled guilty to his fifth offense of driving under the influence. The Court sentenced him pursuant to 21 Del. C. § 4177(d) (5) and (8).² Pursuant to 21 Del. C. § 4177(d) (8), the Court could suspend half of defendant's minimum sentence of 3 years for probation once it imposed the conditions required of 21 Del. C. § 4177(d)(9).³ Thus, the Court sentenced him to 5 years at Level 5, and suspended defendant's Level 5 sentence after 18 months at Level 5 for 18 months at Level 3 probation. Pursuant to a corrected order dated June 12, 2013, defendant was not required to report to Level 5 until June 21, 2013.

2 The applicable statutory provisions are:

(d) Whoever is convicted of a violation of subsection (a) of this section shall:

(5) For a fifth offense occurring any time after 4 prior offenses, be guilty of a class E felony, be fined not more than $10,000 and imprisoned not less than 3 years nor more than 5 years.

(8) For the fifth, sixth, seventh offense or greater, the provisions of § 4205(b) or § 4217 of Title 11 or any other statute to the contrary notwithstanding, at least ½ of any minimum sentence shall be served at Level V and shall not be subject to any early release, furlough or reduction of any kind. The sentencing court may suspend up to ½ of any minimum sentence set forth in this section provided, however, that any portion of a sentence suspended pursuant to his paragraph shall include participation in both a drug and alcohol abstinence program and a drug and alcohol treatment program as set forth in paragraph (d)(9) of this section.

3 21 Del. C. § 4177(d)(9) provides in pertinent part:

Any minimum sentence suspended pursuant to paragraph ... (d)(8) of this section shall be upon the condition that the offender shall complete a program of supervision which shall include:

a. A drug and alcohol abstinence program requiring that the offender maintain a period of not less than 90 consecutive days of sobriety as measured by a transdermal continuous alcohol monitoring device. In addition to such device, the offender shall participate in periodic, random breath or urine analysis during the entire period of supervision.

b. An intensive inpatient or outpatient drug and alcohol treatment program for a period of not less than 3 months. Such treatment and counseling may be completed while an offender is serving a Level V or Level IV sentence.

c. Any other terms or provision deemed appropriate by the sentencing court or the Department of Correction.

*2 On December 17, 2013, the Board of Parole granted defendant parole. It placed him on Level 3 supervision. Defendant was released from Level 5 incarceration on or about December 18, 2013. As of that time, defendant had served not quite 6 months of his 18 months at Level 5.

The State of Delaware (“the State”) filed an emergency motion to correct an illegal sentence, which is an inappropriate motion because the sentence was not illegal. That motion is denied as meritless. It then filed in the criminal matter a petition seeking a writ of mandamus directing the Board of Parole to rescind its decision releasing defendant on parole prior to his serving the 18 months required by 21 Del. C. § 4177(d)(5) and (8).

A hearing on the matter was scheduled for December 27, 2013. Prior to that hearing, the Board of Parole reviewed its decision and conceded the State's position.

Defendant appeared at the December 27, 2013 hearing. Defendant maintained that he should be released on parole. The Court continued the hearing and required the State and defendant to submit briefing on the following issues:

1) Is defendant entitled to release on parole pursuant to 11 Del. C. § 4346(a)⁴ since he has served 1/3 of his sentence; and

4 This statute, 11 Del. C. § 4346(a), provides in pertinent part:

A person confined to any correctional facility administered by the Department may be released on parole by the Board if the person has served 1/3 of the term imposed by the court, such term to be reduced by such merit and good behavior credits as have been earned, or 120 days, whichever is greater.

2) If he is not entitled to release before serving his 18 month mandatory sentence, may this mandatory 18 months be reduced by good time earned based upon 11 Del. C. § 4381.⁵

5 The applicable portions of 11 Del. C. § 4381 are as follows:

(a) Subject to the limitations set forth in subsection (b) of this section, all sentences, other than a life sentence, imposed for any offense pursuant to any provision of this title, Title 16 and/or Title 21 may be reduced by good time credit under the provisions of this subchapter and rules and regulations adopted by the Commissioner of Corrections. This provision will apply regardless of any previously imposed statutory limitations set forth in this title, Title 16 or Title 21.

(b) The awarding of good time credit set forth in subsection (a) of this section above will not apply to sentences imposed pursuant to § 4214 or § 4204(k) of this title or sentences imposed prior to the enactment of this statute.

Thereafter, the State filed a Petition for Writ of Mandamus in a civil action, apparently in an effort to place the matter before the Court in the correct procedural posture. Defendant obtained the Public Defender's Office to represent him. His counsel has filed several motions, including a motion to dismiss the State's various filings. The Board of Parole has taken no further steps, nor does the Court expect it to do so in light of its decision not to oppose the State's petition.

Procedurally, the case is rather convoluted. However, the two underlying legal questions are simple and they require resolution. I resolve those questions below.

Initially, I address whether the Board of Parole has jurisdiction over this matter. This Court has ruled that a driving under the influence sentence is non-TIS.⁶ Thus, the Board of Parole has authority over non-TIS sentences such as DUI sentences and the repealed non-TIS statutes apply.⁷

⁶ State v. Clyne, 2002 WL 1652149, *2 n. 6 (Del.Super. July 22, 2002). Furthermore, the SENTAC Commission has recognized that felony driving under the influence ("DUI") sentences are non-TIS. On January 17, 2014, the SENTAC Commission voted to recommend legislation that would make felony DUIs to be TIS sentences as opposed to non-TIS sentences.

⁷ See id. at *3 n. 12.

*3 The case of *Woodward v. Department of Corrections*⁸ resolves the question of whether defendant is eligible for parole after serving 1/3 of his sentence. Woodward holds that to be released on parole before the mandatory time elapses would violate the express terms of the statute under which a defendant was sentenced.

The sentencing statute in this case, 21 Del. C. § 4177(d)(5) and (8), requires that defendant serve 18 months at Level 5. Where, as here, the mandatory time period of the sentencing statute is greater than the period set forth in 11 Del. C. § 4346(a), a defendant must serve the mandatory time period before becoming entitled to release on parole.⁹

⁸ 415 A.2d 782 (Del.Super.1980), aff'd, 416 A.2d 1225 (Del.1980) ("Woodward"). As the later discussion below shows, I do not follow Woodward with regard to the reduction of this sentence for good time credits; the statutory amendments subsequent to Woodward render that portion of the decision to be invalid.

Therefore, the Board of Parole had no discretion to grant parole to a defendant serving the mandatory portion of his sentence. The Board of Parole is directed to reverse its decision as to the granting of parole to Jeffrey W. Barnes

The next question is whether defendant may receive good time credits on this mandatory 18 month period. The answer to this question requires the Court to delve into a bit of statutory history.

In 2010, the Legislature amended 11 Del. C. § 4381¹⁰ to allow for the award of good time credits on all sentences except for life sentences, those imposed pursuant to 11 Del. C. § 4214,¹¹ and those imposed pursuant to 11 Del. C. § 4204(k).¹² The synopsis of Senate Bill 320 explains the rationale for this legislation:

The ability of inmates to earn good time credits was a mechanism established to assist and encourage appropriate behavior by inmates while they are incarcerated. This general concept has been modified by the General Assembly over time to prohibit good time credit for specific offenses. Unfortunately, this ad hoc application has caused significant administrative issues to arise that are difficult to address with limited staff and is inconsistent with the original intent and purpose of good time credit. This legislation proposed by SENTAC will ensure a fair and consistent application of credit time and will restore its original purpose as a tool for prisoner management. The legislation has no effect on the procedures used to award good time credit by DOC or the ability of the Commissioner to forfeit good time credit to reflect inappropriate prison behavior. The legislation will however restore the ability of inmates (other than ones serving a life sentence) to be awarded good time credit regardless of the statutory offense for which they are incarcerated subject to the limitations set forth in subparagraph (b). SENTAC has prepared this legislation as a result of its belief that it reflects the appropriate management of limited DOC resources and will result in financial savings to the State. The inmates will be supervised during their conditional release period by DOC probation officers.

This legislation became effective on July 15, 2010, when the Governor signed it.

10 S.B. 320 with Senate Amendment 1.

11 11 Del. C. § 4214 pertains to defendants sentenced as habitual offenders.

12 11 Del. C. § 4204(k) allows for the courts, in certain instances, to require a sentence be served day for day.

The applicable sentencing statute, 21 Del. C. § 4177(d)(8), was signed on August 3, 2011, and became effective on June 30, 2012.¹³ Both events are after the enactment of the current version of 11 Del. C. § 4381. The question is whether the language specifying that the minimum sentence “shall not be subject to any early release, furlough or reduction of any kind” means that good time credits may not be applied. That language, instructing that a minimum sentence for felony driving under the influence convictions “shall not be subject to any early release, furlough or reduction of any kind,” has existed since the legislature mandated certain driving under the influence convictions to be felonies.¹⁴ Because the language stating that a defendant “shall not be subject to any early release, furlough or reduction of any kind” existed at the time the applicable version of 11 Del. C. § 4381 was enacted, the amendment to 21 Del. C. § 4177 in 2011 did not render 11 Del. C. § 4381 inapplicable.

13 Sections 12 and 24 of H.B. 168, as amended by House Amendment No. 1, House Amendment No. 2 as amended by House Amendment No. 1 to House Amendment No. 2 and House Amendment No. 3.

14 70 Del. Laws, ch. 62 (1995).

*4 No matter what, I conclude 11 Del. C. § 4381 applies. With regards to the award of good time credits and early release, the Court must construe the applicable provisions of 21 Del. C. § 4177 in pari materia with 11 Del. C. § 4381.¹⁵ It would be absurd to not allow good time credits on a felony sentence pursuant to 21 Del. C. § 4177 after the legislature had just recently enacted 11 Del. C. § 4381 to award such credits. To hold otherwise would mean that the problems 11 Del. C. § 4381 eliminated would once again commence. The Court will not reach such an absurd result.

15 Watson v. Burgan, 610 A.2d 1364, 1368 (Del.1992).

Thus, defendant is entitled to good time credits on his 18 months Level 5 time pursuant to 11 Del. C. § 4381.

In conclusion, defendant is not entitled to an early release of incarceration pursuant to 11 Del. C. § 4346(a), and to that extent, the petition is GRANTED and the Court hereby directs the Board of Parole to reverse its decision allowing parole pursuant to 11 Del. C. § 4346(a). However, defendant's 18 months of mandatory time may be reduced by good time credits awarded pursuant to 11 Del. C. § 4381. Because defendant has not reached the point where those good time credits would require his release, he currently is not entitled to release from incarceration.¹⁶ Defendant's arguments that his rights will be violated by requiring he go back to prison are meritless. The decision granting parole was illegal. He never should have been released from incarceration. No constitutional or ex post facto laws come into play. He must return to prison immediately.

16 This conclusion means there is no clear legal right to a direction to the Board of Parole or Department of Correction that defendant be released from incarceration and consequently, no entitlement to a writ of mandamus exists. See State v. Clyne, supra, at * 1.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
